

Muhammad Ali... Races Should Be Separate

THE SERIOUS MOD-DRESSED SPEAKER

(Freeman Photo by Haines)

By MORT LAFFIN KINGSTON

His movement on stage reminded one of a caged tiger, imprisoned by his mod-cut, pin-striped suit. His delivery from the podium was reminiscent of the way he boxed as the heavy-weight champion of the world. And his charming, boyish grin sometimes beguiled the seriousness of his message.

This was Muhammad Ali, nee Cassius Clay, former heavy-weight boxing champion of the world, as he spoke before 800 cheering, sometimes screaming spectators, Wednesday night at Kingston High School auditorium.

His lecture, entitled "The Future of Blacks in America," was organized and sponsored by the Student Government Organization at Ulster Community College.

Ali worked the stage, the crowd and his subject matter as he did many of his ring opponents, setting them up with feints and jabs and then delivering his faster-than-lightning combinations before hitting them with the knockout punch.

"I am here to speak the truth," he said. "Not the stories you hear in school or at home, but the truth that even your preachers can't tell you because they are afraid they will lose their licenses. The future of the black man in America is not one of integration, violence or politics, but in separation, complete separation from all the races."

"I'd take him in five, that ain't no jive, and if he don't believe me, I'll do it in three." Story and photo on page 21.

As he spoke on integration, cries of "Tell it like it is" and "That's right, brother," went up from the audience.

"No black man in his right mind wants integration," said Ali. "Neither does the white man. You can't lose your identity as a race or culture. For years we have been fighting to get into the white man's restaurant, only to find we didn't like the food. Every man and woman wants his or her children to look like themselves, not somebody else, whether they are black or white."

Ali went on, "Violence isn't the answer either. How can you and I, with our little pop-guns, fight super-phantom jets, or the men that went to the moon. We'll only end up getting ourselves killed and what won't solve nothin'."

"Politics won't help," said Ali. "We had Abraham Lincoln and they shot him. We had the Kennedys and they shot them. We have to help ourselves."

"We also had Martin Luther King Jr. and Medgar Evers, and they shot them, too. Black people, for 400 years have been white-oriented, from a white Jesus Christ and Apostles to a white Santa Claus and even 'white tornadoes,' a reference to a famous television ad.

"It is about time, he said, that people stop being slaves to the white man and find their own way. Separate from the white culture, have our own country, clean ourselves, build our own buildings, have our own jobs, scientists, lawyers, leaders. Then, and only then will we be free."

When asked how all this separation would come about, Ali said:

"It is in the hands of Allah, God, Supreme Being. We must trust in our leader, Elijah Muhammad (head of the Muslims) for guidance. My brothers and sisters can enroll in the nearest Muslim Temple and read our newspapers and books for direction."

"We don't want to be white," he said, "and they don't want to black, so we gotta get out and do our own thing. Tigers live with tigers, lions live with lions, bluebirds fly with bluebirds, red birds fly with red birds. If animals can see that different cultures can't mix, we too, should see it the same way."

A lively question and answer period followed, with questions ranging from the formation of a socialist society, to Ali's reported $90,000 home in a predominantly white section of Philadelphia.

He handled the questions as he did his opponents, bobbing and weaving, setting them up for the combinations that made him one of the most feared fighters of the century. And, all the time with the same theme, "Black Separatism."

He said that Joe Namath can brag about his many conquests of the weaker sex and he's a hero. But, let a Negro go and buy a house and they want to crucify him. "Anyway," he said, "it cost $72,000, not $90,000."

He left the stage amid thunderous applause and screams of "Black Power, Black Power." Ali then had to fight his way to his car, while signing autographs and shaking hands. For the many people there, he is still the "champ."

Fish to Run Again; Local GOP Taps Slate

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. told the Republican chairmen of the nine counties of the 28th District Wednesday night that he will seek nomination for a second term at the 28th Congressional District Republican Convention March 18 at the Nevele Hotel in Ellenville.

It is anticipated that Fish will get the nod without any foreseen opposition at this time.

Wednesday's meeting at the Dutch Rathskeller was called by Ulster County Republican Chairman Albert Spada who was elected by the others as chairman of the recently formed Congressional District Republicans. The meeting, he said, was called specifically to set up the congressional convention and to gather together for the first time all the chairmen of the recently re-apportioned district which was expanded from five to nine counties.

Meanwhile the Ulster County Executive Committee has recommended for nomination the following: Fish, State Senator Jay P. Rolison Jr., Assemblyman H. Clark Bell, County Treasurer Fred DuBois, Coroner Arthur C. Chipp and First Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Vogt who seeks the nomination for district attorney. The incumbent DA Joseph Torracca is not seeking another term.

On the state Republican front, Chairman Charles T. Lanigan announced this week that he has called a meeting of the 62 county chairmen for March 3 at 10 a.m. in the Thruway-Hyatt House, Albany, to discuss "a variety of matters concerning the 1970 election campaign."

It will be the third in a series of meetings intended to improve liaison between the leadership and the county leaders.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has been invited to address the chairmen and has indicated he will be present.

Lanigan said the agenda will include a discussion of candidates for office including comptroller and U. S. Senator, plans for the meeting of the 360-member Republican State Committee in Rochester, April 6 and 7 and a political education program for party leaders across the state, and such other matters as the chairmen themselves may care to bring up.

Following the first state GOP meeting Dec. 9 at which Gov. Rockefeller called for reelection of the entire Republican slate, including Sen. Charles E. Goodell, the Ulster County GOP Executive Committee endorsed all the candidates except Goodell. Since then some other counties, including Nassau and Suffolk have followed suit additionally emphasizing their sentiments by openly opposing Goodell. The upcoming March 3 meeting is thought to be a final attempt to bring the chairmen into line behind the slate including Goodell.

Spada said that four delegates from each county will be chosen for the convention which will be open to the press. Ulster County GOP Committee will hold its own convention two days later on March 20 at 8 p.m. in the George Washington School. It is anticipated that the Committee will accept at that time the convention choices for Congress.

Spada told The Freeman today that the subject of Wednesday night's meeting was confined to congressional matters and the chairmen did not deviate from that topic, not even for discussion of the state-wide Republican ticket.

Among those invited to last night's meeting, in addition to Spada were Neal Brandow, Greene County; Dwight Lane, Schoharie; John Sharpe, Columbia; George Reid, Dutchess; Scott Greene, Otsego; Cyrus Schoonmaker, Delaware; Harold Cole, Sullivan and Donald Campbell, Montgomery.

Democratic opposition has begun lining up, meanwhile, with the only person mentioned so far to oppose Fish in the congressional race being a Schoharie County woman, Mrs. Martha Dayton, who is chairman of the Schoharie Board of Supervisors. Fish's former contender, John Dyson of Dutchess County announced recently that he would not seek the nomination this year.

State Sen. Rolison is expected to be challenged for his seat by West Shokan lawyer David Lenefsky and perhaps Kingston Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo who is thought to be willing to take Lenefsky on in a primary.

Democratic County Chairman Aaron E. Kleir has also indicated that Rockland County District Attorney Robert Mehan will seek the nomination for the post now held by State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz and that Assemblyman H. Clark Bell will be challenged by County Legislator George Barthel. Ellenville attorney Alex Nirenberg is a candidate for the nomination for district attorney and Joseph F. Saccomani, real estate broker is a candidate to oppose Frederick H. DuBois for county treasurer.

COUNTY GOP CHAIRMEN—Among those attending Wednesday night's Kingston meeting of the nine county chairmen of the newly redistricted 28th Congressional District were (L): John Sharpe, Columbia County; Cyrus Schoonmaker, Delhi County; Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr., Neal Brandow, Greene County; Albert Spada, Ulster County, chairman of the district. A Brand New Route 209 Favored

KINGSTON

The Ulster County Planning Board has come out in favor of "Alternate Two," one of three routes proposed by the State Department of Transportation for the realignment of Route 209. A public hearing to solicit community and local government opinion on the three routes will be scheduled sometime in April.

The Planning Board, which met recently, also agreed to leave to local determination two other proposals — the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company power line to run through Hurley and the proposed garden apartment complex proposed by local builder William Zang in the Pearl Street-Miller Lane area of Kingston.

The Planning Board's endorsement of Alternate Two for the improvement of Route 209 calls for the new alignment to be built as a controlled access highway. It would mean constructing the road on a new location that generally follows the abandoned right of way of the former New York, Ontario and Western Railroad. Access would be fully controlled from Spring Glen to Hurley with interchanges at selected crossroads. The alternate would swing to the west just south of Ellenville, bypassing the Nevele and Fallsview Country Clubs to preclude disruption of existing property expansion and development of the Shawangunk slopes for winter recreational facilities. The proposed route then returns to the railroad alignment and essentially follows it to the recently constructed section of Route 209, south of Hurley.

In commenting on the proposal, Herbert Hekler, county planning director, said, "We have been working with the Department of Transportation and the towns affected since the inception of this project. We are very pleased with Alternate Two because it will serve to improve both the traffic needs of the Rondout Valley and compliance with the land use plans for future development. This improvement is urgently needed."

The public hearing on the matter was suggested by M. Nicholas Sinacore, regional director of the State Department of Transportation, who in a letter to Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, suggested that a hearing be conducted in April. He suggested further that written views concerning the project be submitted to the department. Meanwhile, maps showing the three proposed alternates along the existing alignment have been distributed to the supervisors of the towns involved in order that they and town residents may scrutinize the details of the proposal and bring forth some form of public sentiment.

Alternate One calls for the reconstruction of Rt. 209 generally on its existing alignment, eliminating sub-standard geometry, sight distance and capacity features.

Alternate Three would combine the first and second alternates and reconstruct Rt. 209 partially on its present location and partly on new locations. The segment of the corridor under study extends through or close to the communities of Spring Glen, Ellenville, Napanoch, Wawarsing, Kerhonkson, Accord, Stone Ridge and Marletown. In some locations the route operates as a village or hamlet street as it passes through a community. It mixes local and inter-community traffic, resort-recreational and commercial truck traffic, producing restraints and congestion inconsistent with the rural character of the communities.

With regard to the power line construction in Hurley, Hekler said the board agreed to leave the question of approval for local determination.

The board also agreed to leave final decision to the City of Kingston with regard to the Zang petition for zoning change from RRR to R-4 which would mean zoning it for low density multiple housing. Under present zoning there is a 12,500 square foot requirement for lots. Under R-4, 17.4 units per acre or 2,500 for the county, Hekler said.

square feet for each development unit is required.

The petition made by Zang and his wife under the business designation of Our Home Inc., states that the petitioners "have a very substantial investment in lands developed for residential homes and would not consider the construction of apartment sites which might in any way be detrimental."

The area in question is located near a pond which lies between Miller's Lane and Pearl Street and Hillside Acres but does not front on Pearl Street. It is located in both the City of Kingston and Town of Ulster. Zoning is required in Kingston but not in Ulster.

The board meeting was also devoted to adopting goals which are to be used to develop a plan for the county, Hekler said.

Kiwanians Hear Dr. Abruzzi

Drugs and Abuses... A Thorough Look

KINGSTON Dr. William Abruzzi told some 150 members of the Kingston Kiwanis Club and their guests at the Gov. Clinton Hotel Wednesday night that they should set an example for their children if they hoped to cope with the drug problem among youth.

Dr. Abruzzi, a Wappingers Falls (Dutchess County) resident, is an expert on drugs and its abuses. He is currently a staff member of the health center at the State University College at New Paltz. Abruzzi is widely known for the medical aid he provided to participants in the White Lake music festival in Sullivan County last summer. Howard St. John was a member of the Kiwanis committee that invited Abruzzi to Kingston. "Before we condemn the kids," he said, "let's look at adults and the alcohol, cigarettes and pills they consume. We are a pill-oriented society. We shouldn't be sanctimonious. We can't castigate the kids."

Abruzzi termed the "Woodstock Festival" a phenomenon of our times.

Speaking of the "youth revolt," he said, "The generation gap is very real and one that adults are not about to bridge. This is because of the tremendously different stimuli that the young people experience today, especially through TV and media," he said. "Since we can't bridge it (the generation gap), we should at least try to communicate."

Dr. Abruzzi said that he felt ing to do something idealistic. Our generation really didn't. They are very active and militant," he said. "The day of authority is long gone unless there is genuine respect for the person with authority."

He said that "50 to 60 per cent of our young people are regularly using drugs, 20-22 million of our young people in the country." He estimated that 300,000 and young persons are heroin users. Dr. Abruzzi said that the "generation gap" is a factor in drug usage by young persons. "They have lost confidence in adults. We, as a society, have lied about drugs over many years, for instance, that marijuana is a narcotic and leads to heroin. As a result, they think that all we say is untrue."

Dr. Abruzzi said he was opposed to the legalization of marijuana because he is not really sure what it does to the brain. "However," he said, "kids can ask why are alcohol and cigarettes legalized? Two wrongs don't make a right."

He considered amphetamines "extremely dangerous" and said they should be outlawed except for pharmaceutical use. He termed barbiturates "almost as bad." He said that the methadone approach may be the best to solve the heroin problem. Dr. Abruzzi termed LSD "the most powerful chemical ever synthesized." "A bad trip can be like instant analysis. Many people can't cope with it when they take a trip."

He said that he has discussed LSD with Dr. Timothy Leary (an LSD advocate) and "that even Leary is advising against indiscriminate use of LSD."

Dr. Abruzzi said he would continue his work on narcotics and its uses and said he hoped to have a complete drug analysis center for analyzing drugs at New Paltz in the next several months. He pointed out that at present drugs have to be sent to either New York City or Albany for analysis and the results can take up to 10 days to get back.

Two Special Meetings

Gallo Evaluating Situation

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo ruled out any comment on the two meetings of the Common Council that took place while he was on a vacation last week, in a statement to The Daily Freeman today. The Council met in special session on Feb. 19 to "act on the new city hall plans but that meeting was adjourned by acting president Edward Norton (D-11th Ward) until last Tuesday night. The Council did not act on the city hall at the meeting and adjourned. "City hall is too vital an issue to get involved in personalities," Gallo said today. He added that he was evaluating the situation.

Gallo said he had been unaware that the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency did not have clear title to the land it owns which has been designated as the city hall site in Broadway East. "I was under the impression that as soon as we approved the bids for the new city hall the land would be delivered," Gallo said. He said he would meet with urban renewal officials to get a clear picture of the land situation. Mayor Francis R. Koenig said today that he hoped the Council would act on the city hall plans at its regular March 3 meeting. He said he was in favor of the new city hall in Broadway East. Gallo returned from vacation late Tuesday night, a few hours after the Common Council meeting was adjourned.

Abram—Door Closes Fast

United Press International Unless his lawyer can come up with something, Morris B. Abram was out of the Democratic U.S. Senate race in New York today before he even got in it. Robert Stevens, commissioner of elections in Dutchess County, said Wednesday night that Abram had registered in Poughkeepsie Jan. 26. He said that was too late to get in the June 23 Democratic primary fight.

Abram resigned as president of Brandeis University Monday, saying he would announce his candidacy for the Senate in 10 days. John J. Burns of Binghamton, head of the Democratic state committee, said that in view of the registration, Abram would have to get consent of the committee in order to run. "It's not an easy thing to do," Burns added.

As a former assistant to Arthur Goldberg when Goldberg was U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Abram has most of his support in New York from Democratic big wigs who unsuccessfully tried to get Goldberg to run against Governor Rockefeller or Sen. Charles E. Goodell. Abram said his attorney had concluded "the law makes crystal clear my eligibility to run."

"I was registered in Larchmont from 1962 to 1968," Abram said. "I transferred my residence to Pawling in 1968 but did not register again, thinking the other registration still was good until January 1970. Contacted in Schenectady, Tom Wallace, director of the State Election Law Bureau, said Abram's Poughkeepsie registration would count if it were a transfer within Dutchess County (Larchmont is in Westchester County) or if Abram had just turned 21 (he's 51). "Off hand," Wallace said, "I doubt if he can run." Already announced for the New York Senate race are Paul O'Dwyer, who was the unsuccessful 1968 candidate against Sen. Jacob K. Javits; Rep. Richard L. Ottinger and Theodore Sorensen. Reps. Richard D. McCarthy of Buffalo and Benjamin S. Rosenthal of Queens were expected to announce shortly.

Two Juveniles Nabbed; City Vandalism Continues

KINGSTON Two boy juveniles have been turned over to the Juvenile Aid Bureau of the Kingston Police Department, in connection with the incident that occurred Saturday when a section of the rear window of a car was shot out as it traveled along Clifton Avenue. Detective Lt. Charles McCullough said the boys, both 13, were to be questioned further by officers of the juvenile bureau.

Police have confiscated a gas-operated air pellet gun which authorities said was used in damaging the glass in a car owned by Robert D. Fescio of Sunrise Park, a post office employee, and his 2-year-old daughter, Beverly Ann, narrowly escaped injury as the result of the incident.

Youth Given 180 Days On Marijuana Charge

TOWN OF ULSTER A 17-year-old youth was sentenced to 180 days in the Ulster County Jail on Wednesday, after he pleaded guilty before Town Justice Arthur A. Reilly to a charge of criminal possession of dangerous drugs sixth degree-marijuana, according to Kingston State Police.

BCI Investigator Carl Van Wagenen arrested Jacques Pons of Shandaken after an investigation. The youth was accused of having 12 marijuana cigarettes in his possession, authorities said.

In another case involving drugs, Ellenville BCI officers on Wednesday afternoon arrested 19-year-old Mickey Shurat of Ulster Heights on charges of possessing dangerous drugs sixth degree and implements capable of administering narcotics.

Investigators Edward Whalen and Larry Grogan made the arrest and arraigned the youth before Rochester Town Justice Harold Lipton. The case was adjourned until Thursday, March 5 and referred to Justice Maurice Rosenstock for disposition.

Shriver Resigns Post As Envoy to France

WASHINGTON (UPI) —R. Sargent Shriver has added fuel to speculation about his political plans by confirming reports he has submitted to President Nixon his resignation as U.S. ambassador to France.

But when he was asked if he was leaving the Paris post, Shriver said "In all frankness, I don't know."

Shriver was also vague about the exact date of the resignation. He said it had been on Nixon's desk "for several months or several weeks."

Shriver said he had kept standing resignations on the desks of Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson and added that he would be "very happy" to stay on in Paris.

that he intended to resign as ambassador after the Pompidou visit. But when he was asked if he was leaving the Paris post, Shriver said "In all frankness, I don't know."

Area Teachers Avert Trouble in Hudson

HUDSON Three high school teachers, including two who reside in the Town of Woodstock, averted what might have developed into a serious incident when they broke up a fight between two students at the school Wednesday afternoon.

Police were called to the local school to investigate the fracas.

High School Principal Vincent Ganci said today that one of the boys—both minors—is being petitioned into family court because one of the teachers reportedly was attacked by the youth with a knife. Ganci said there were no serious injuries.

The three teachers were identified as Robert Scott, a science teacher and Alexander Stokas, English teacher, both of Woodstock, and Gerald Mull, a teacher from the Clavarak area.

"The teachers are to be commended for their alertness and expert handling of the situation which could have been much worse than it was," said the principal.

School officials said the fight began about 12:40 p.m. in a school corridor when the two students involved had a misunderstanding.

Ganci and Edward Koenig, assistant principal, were notified of the fight and when they reached the scene they found the teachers had separated the two boys.

The fight came in the wake of a move by the Board of Education Monday night to provide additional administrative personnel for Hudson Junior High School because of a disturbance last week when police were called in. A teacher said yesterday's incident pointed out the need for more discipline and administrative help in the high school and the junior high school.

SAUGERTIES complaint filed against Hudson Valley Lightweight Aggregate Corp., Mt. Marion, has been adjourned for one week to Wednesday, March 4.

Pollution Charges

Aggregate Hearing Adjourned

The corporation was summoned to answer the charges of the complaint before Saugerties Town Justice Michael A. Catalinotto.

However, the firm's local attorneys, Schirmer and Carnright withdrew from the case because Ernest E. Schirmer is clerk of the Saugerties Justice Court.

John Larkin appeared for Lightweight Aggregate and on request was granted a week's adjournment in which to make motions.

The matter of this action is expected to be reported at an open discussion of air pollution conditions in northern Ulster County scheduled for 8 o'clock tonight at the American Legion Hall, John Street by Ulster County Citizens Committee for Clean Air.

It was reported late in December that Hudson Valley Lightweight Aggregate Corp., was contemplating the installation of anti-air pollution equipment expected to cost in excess of $300,000 to bring the plant in compliance with state and county health regulations given permanent names and the Town of Saugerties have been designated only as "A, B, C, D, E."

John Bragg, vice-president of the firm at that time said he had advised the County Health Department and Saugerties Supervisor A. Michael Schovel of the company's decision.

He said the firm had been investigating several methods of air cleaning and has come to a decision of which to install. He also noted that no timetable for installation could be given because of the extensive engineering involved before the equipment could be installed.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Kienast quintuplets, exercising the prerogative of all newborn babies, howled lustily throughout their first day of life Wednesday, delighting doctors concerned with breathing problems connected with premature births.

The five children were born six weeks early Tuesday night to Mrs. Margaret Kienast, Far Hills, N.J., who had taken fertility drugs to overcome ovulation problems.

Mrs. Kienast, 27, had also taken the drug Perganol before the birth of her other children, a 4 1/2 year-old daughter and an 18-month-old son. She and her salesman husband, William, 38, had been warned to expect triplets and possibly quadruplets.

Pediatricians at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center expressed their pleasure at the fact the babies lungs were in such fine working order, indicating they had overcome early breathing problems.

"For a complicated delivery we couldn't hope for the babies to be in better condition than they are now," said Dr. Stanley James, the hospital's chief KINGSTON A tentative draft of Ulster County's proposed new charter is in the hands of the county's consultants, Hanawalt Associates for indexing, cross-referencing and other detailing of the document, according to Ward S. Ingalsbe, commission chairman.

The Charter Commission met Wednesday night in regular session to consider various aspects of the charter itself as well as its future presentation to people for a vote.

It is expected, he said, that in the not too distant future the commission will have an instrument to vote on and forward to the Ulster County Legislature for consideration. The charter, as drawn by the commission is merely a recommendation. Ingalsbe stressed, saying it can be revised or revamped at the pleasure of the county board.

The commission, which began its work a few years ago, was asked to draw up a charter calling for an executive form of government. From time to time, as various aspects and functions of county government were examined, studied and revised and public hearings were held in many areas of the county on a variety of proposals. It is anticipated that once the charter is forwarded to the Legislature, it will come under more and closer scrutiny before being put before the public in a referendum.

Ingalsbe is hopeful that the charter will be on the November ballot.

Four Men Seeking Pair of Seats On New Paltz Village Board

By SHANE CROSBY

NEW PALTZ Four names have been presented for placement on the village ballot here in contention for two seats on the board of trustees.

After Tuesday's deadline for filing petitions in New Paltz, the names of Harold Phillips and William George were submitted for reelection to the board each.

on the People's Party and the names of John Logan and Charles Wooster were submitted for the Citizens' Party.

Village Clerk Wilber Fredenburgh said all four petitions "are acceptable" and the names may be placed on the March 17 ballot. Petitions were required to carry at least 75 names, and the clerk said all four carried at least 100 names each.

In Ellenville, no independent petitions were received by Village Clerk Mrs. Lillian Finkelstein, leaving the ballot with four party selections for two seats. The Democratic Party named George Halbig and David Kramer at a recent caucus and a spokesman said a party meeting will be held this evening to work on program and platform.

Halbig is a correction officer with the state prison in Napamuch and has been active on state employee committees dealing with legislative matters in Albany. Kramer, a construction expert, is on the Ellenville Housing Authority. Joseph Stoeckler, party chairman, said issues to be raised in the Ellenville election will center around past decisions of the village board as well as Urban Renewal problems.

Seeking reelection to one of the two trustee seats in Ellenville is DeWitt Clinton, who was named by the Republican Party along with Mrs. Sandra Lonstein, wife of a village attorney and active in GOP work. Trustee Rivan Krieger, a Republican, has not entered the election race. Krieger was appointed to the seat vacated when Mayor Robert Dowling was elected to his present post last year.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE—Town of Ulster Library Trustees has set April for a membership drive. Letters will be sent to area residents asking their assistance. Discussing the campaign are (l-r) seated, Frank Oneto, chairman; Mrs. George Fassino, trustee; Walter Houle, president; standing, Mrs. Olav Sande, publicity and Mrs. Robert Gorsline, co-chairman. Plan School for Retarded

NEW PALTZ A nursery school for mentally retarded children two years old and over is being planned for this community to serve the southeastern region of Ulster County.

Daniel J. Leahy, executive director of the Association for Retarded Children in Kingston, envisioned the nursery as offering a three-day a week program "in a home like setting." The director said classroom facilities have been offered by parishioners of the Redeemer Lutheran Church in New Paltz, near the State University College.

Also offered through the New Paltz center, according to Leahy, would be a program of "counseling to parents, with regard to feeding, training and the future education of their child."

He said staffing of the new center would include a part-time licensed teacher and volunteers drawn from interested residents and college students.

At present, said the director, three mentally retarded children who are treated in Kingston would be able to use the center, and he said he is hoping that support from area residents would bring in more children.

Leahy noted that one suggestion for the location of the new retarded children's facility was based on "the hope that faculty and students" at the state University College "would support the program enthusiastically."

But, the director emphasized that residents and parents of retarded children would be needed to make the plan successful. "It is hoped," said Leahy, "that any person interested in aiding the work of the Association in this area would offer their assistance in the foundation of this important program."

Included in the founding group that recently met to discuss the creation of the center were Joseph A. Castellana of the University College staff; Mrs. Dona B. Donoghue, staff teacher of the Kingston program; Mrs. J. Donald Kent, teacher of trainable mentally retarded; Mrs. Noma D. Mabey, Social Worker for the New Paltz School; Mrs. Betty Millhan, coordinator of the Mental Health Study Program; and the Rev. Paul Mertzluft pastor of the Redeemer Church.

Leahy asked that parents who feel their child might benefit from this program in New Paltz and for the Highland, Milton and Marlboro area also call the Kingston office of the Association for Retarded Children at 1 Van Buren Street.

Town of Milan Has a Problem

TOWN OF MILAN The problem of what to do with mobile homes remains a problem in this northern Dutchess County town following a public hearing Tuesday evening.

After many of the 64 residents in attendance had expressed their opinions, members of the town board voted and remained deadlocked on a proposed amendment to the Hook and Rhinebeck.

mobile home section of the zoning law.

The amendment would have restricted the establishment of mobile home sites to the recreation areas of the town and trailer parks. They are presently allowed on five-acre plots of land.

Most of those polled by a show of hands at the hearing felt that Milan would suffer if it did not adopt restrictive legislation similar to that in surrounding towns such as Red Hook and Rhinebeck.

Algiers Motel Case

Michigan Jury Finds 4 Innocent

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — An all-white jury has found three white policemen and a Negro private guard innocent of conspiracy in the Algiers Motel incident in which three black youths were killed during Detroit's 1967 riots.

The jurors deliberated nearly nine hours before reaching a verdict Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

The three suspended police officers—Ronald August, 30, Robert Paille, 34, and David Senak, 25—all said they would seek reinstatement with the Detroit police force. They indicated they might seek full back pay for their two and a half years off duty.

Melvin Diamukes, 26, the Negro private guard, said he feared for his life.

"Every place I go, I go armed," Diamukes told newsmen after the verdict. "This is a great load off my mind, but when I leave here it's just the beginning. I don't know who is waiting for me out in the dark."

The four defendants were accused of conspiring "to injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate" ten occupants of the motel when they raided the building July 26, 1967 in a search for reported snipers.

Witnesses said two white girls and eight Negro youths were beaten with rifle butts or otherwise abused by police and National Guardsmen.

If found guilty, the defendants could have been sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000.

In an earlier trial, August was acquitted of first-degree murder in the death of one of the three youths slain at the motel—Aubrey Pollard, 19—and Diamukes was found innocent of felonious assault in connection with one of the alleged beatings.

Two other criminal cases arising from the incident are still pending in Michigan's appellate courts.

One is a conspiracy charge filed by the state, the other a first-degree murder charge against Paille in the death of Fred Temple, 18.

Both cases were dismissed by lower courts, but the dismissals were appealed by the state.

When the jury brought in the verdict of acquittal, there was a sigh of relief from the defense table.

INNOCENT—AUGUST (L), DISMUKES, PAILLE, SENAK (UPI Telephoto)

Senate, Assembly Leaders—No Impasse on 18 Vote

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Republican leaders of the Senate and Assembly insist that they will reconcile before the end of the 1970 session the glaring difference between two measures passed in their respective houses aimed at securing the vote for 18 year olds.

"We're certainly not at an impasse," Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea Jr. told a reporter Wednesday. "There's plenty of time to resolve this question of lowering the voting age before the end of the session."

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Earl W. Brydges said the Senate majority leader agrees completely with Duryea's assessment.

The Senate approved, 54-3, Brydges' proposal to lower the voting age in New York State from 21 to 18 in a single step.

But the Assembly's Republican majority overcame Democratic opposition in that house and endorsed, 78-71, a three-step arrangement that would reduce the voting age initially to 20, then to 19 four years later and finally to 18 after another four years.

The voting-age plans involve a change in the State Constitution and thus could not be implemented until approved by two separately elected legislatures and the voters in a statewide referendum.

The earliest any change could take effect is 1972, in time for the next presidential election.

If Brydges gets his way—and the voters concur—18 year olds could go to the polls at that time. But, under the Duryea proposal, the 18-year-old voting provision would not be in effect until 1980.

The speaker has maintained that there is apparent reluctance among the adult voters to extend the voting franchise to young people. Therefore, he says, it would be better to move gradually and, hopefully, pick up more support along the way.

This premise was developed during the two hours of Assembly debate Wednesday. Its proponents of the Duryea approach cited their private polls showing many adults hostile to 18-year-old voting. Moreover, some said, voters in New Jersey recently rejected the lower voting age and New Yorkers could be inclined to do the same.

Brydges, however, is disposed to effect the age change in the simplest possible way. As he sees it, the legislature should go on record as favoring the 18-year-old vote and then let the voters enrolled in 1971 have the final say.

The senator's desire to keep things simple was reflected in another aspect of the approach he took.

Some legislators have sought to include in the voting provision a related proposal that would make the age of majority for all purposes 18, instead of 21.

This would mean that 18 year olds could be held responsible for such things as contractual obligations. Some criminal statutes also would be affected.

But Brydges headed off the attempt to link the two. The Senate Republicans in general are proposing as an alternative that a special study group be formed and look into the estimated 1,400 areas that would be involved if the age of majority were lowered.

During the Senate action on the voting proposal, Republican John J. Marchi of Staten Island argued for inclusion of the age-of-majority concept, saying this would give "substance and meaning to bringing the franchise to young people."

Marchi and Sens. John H. Hughes, R-Syracuse, and Samuel L. Greenberg, D-Brooklyn, cast the three negative votes.

Javits, McGovern Oppose Carswell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Jacob K. Javits and George S. McGovern said today they will vote against confirmation of G. Harrold Carswell's Supreme Court nomination because of dissatisfaction with his civil rights record.

Public opposition in the Senate to the Tallahassee, Fla., federal appeals judge reached 18 with the Javits-McGovern announcements. More senators are expected to come out against Carswell but indications still point to his confirmation.

McGovern, a South Dakota Democrat, considered a possible presidential aspirant in 1972, said in a prepared speech "I am appalled that our President would regard this nominee as a worthy appointment to the nation's highest court."

After studying Carswell's record as a federal district court judge and later a member of the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals, McGovern said "I find that record to be distinguished largely by two qualities—racism and mediocrity."

Javits became the third Republican to announce against President Nixon's second attempt to name a Southerner to the Supreme Court seat vacated last spring by Abe Fortas.

Sen. Charles E. Goodell, Javits' New York colleague, said several weeks ago he would oppose the nomination and Massachusetts Sen. Edward W. Brooke, the only black member, announced Wednesday night he would vote no.

Javits, using less biting language in his prepared speech, said Carswell has shown "an insensitivity to the crucial issue of equal rights"—both as a private citizen and as a judge.

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved Carswell's nomination by a 13-4 vote. Its majority report described his record in civil rights cases as one of balance and even-handedness. McGovern and Javits both cited a white supremacy speech Carswell made in 1948 while running for the Georgia legislature and his participation in 1956 in formation of a private country club in Tallahassee to course threatened with desegregation.

Campus Woes—East, West

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo police arrested at least 20 persons late Wednesday in connection with an outbreak of violence at the State University at Buffalo.

Authorities said tension on the campus began to rise before the start of Buffalo's scheduled basketball game with the State University at Albany. A spokesman said a group of dissident youths threatened another sit-in on the court.

After the game was cancelled and Clark Gymnasium cleared, fights and a window-breaking spree broke out. One security guard was seriously injured and at least seven others received minor injuries. Two Buffalo policemen were taken to the hospital after being jumped.

Dr. Peter F. Regan, university president, denounced the action and said he "deeply regretted that the radical left has again proven its irresponsibility and lust for destruction."

A group of about 200 students and non-students prevented Buffalo from meeting Stony Brook State on the basketball court Tuesday night by staging a sit-in.

Tuesday's group, believed to be a factor in the outbreak of violence, claimed "athletic racism" at the university and "professional misconduct" on the part of the coaching staff.

Among the demands made by the group of 200 was the resignation of the entire Buffalo coaching staff.

Meanwhile, in California a police car was overturned and burned and small fires were started in a bank late Wednesday as about 1,500 young persons roamed through a small sealed-off area adjacent to the University of California at Santa Barbara. A spokesman for the sheriff's office said his department had been in touch with Gov. Ronald Reagan's office in Sacramento but added he knew of no request for National Guard troops.

Paul Beck, the governor's press secretary, said he was in contact with the sheriff and "are evaluating the situation."

A four-block Isla Vista community business district was sealed off by deputies when between 500 and 700 students and street people moved into the area following an afternoon speech by William Kunstler, chief defense attorney for the "Chicago seven."

Two policemen were injured when about 70 law officers attempted to disperse a large crowd but were turned away with a barrage of rocks and bottles. One of the men suffered broken ribs and the other a head wound that required 12 stitches.

Rotary's 65th Anniversary

Rotary International on Wednesday celebrated its 65th anniversary. On March 25, 1916, Kingston Rotary Club was formed and today it is a counterpart of the thousands of other Rotary clubs everywhere despite differences in language, religious beliefs and customs within the global organizations.

Paul P. Harris, a young Chicago lawyer, founded Rotary. During the past 65 years, his ideas of friendship, fellowship and service to others have been accepted by men of practically all nationalities. The Rotary concept of service to others binds Rotarians of this community together as it does other Rotarians in communities throughout the world. Nations may be hemmed in by their borders, but Rotary opens its ranks to men of all nationalities as long as they stand "for the liberty of the individual, for freedom of thought, speech, and assembly, freedom from persecution."

For its betterment of communities, its efforts in the interest of youth and the underprivileged, its leadership in raising standards of business and professional practices and its dedication to the advancement of international understanding and friendship, Rotary worldwide deserves to grow and prosper.

On April 13, at the New York State Armory, Kingston Rotary will hold a Job Fair, which will provide high school seniors, who will not attend college, opportunity for employment in the area. Local firms are cooperating and will have representatives present to interview the students and acquaint them with employment opportunities.

This is but one of the many worthwhile civic activities of the local service club.

We salute Rotarians of the world. May it and the spirit it fosters, continue to grow and flourish in the years ahead as it has in the past.

Contempt of U.S. Courts

There is no question but that Judge Julius J. Hoffman was tried, as no jurist in the history of American jurisprudence has been tried, during the five-month trial of the Chicago 7. Sentencing all defendants for contempt of court was also understandable, as was the sentencing of their lawyers.

The defendants and their lawyers made a mockery of U.S. courts—of our entire judicial system. They would have made it a policy that respect for judges was only for "squares." There could never again be a sensible fair trial for anyone in this country, if defendants and their attorneys were to act as the Chicago defendants and their lawyers have done.

The length of the sentences was stiff, yet Judge Hoffman must have pronounced them because he felt something drastic was needed to show the rioters and their ilk that they could not with impunity destroy our trial process. Justice requires respect, peace and quiet for thoughtful deliberation.

Wrong to Read Names

The reading of the names of the men who have died in the Vietnam War either in protest against the war or to support the war effort is reprehensible. These fallen heroes cannot speak for themselves. They cannot say whether they approve or disapprove.

Many of the parents of these boys believe their sons' names are being used in vain. The least that the living can do now is to heed the wishes of the beloved ones they left behind and respect the memories of those men.

The New York Legislature should approve overwhelmingly the measure to be submitted which would outlaw the reading of the war dead by protestors or by those who would use the names to support the war.

"Don't Just Stand There—Do Something!"

David Lawrence Says 'CORE's' New Approach Has Won Support in South

WASHINGTON — Amid all the controversy about segregation and the busing of school children in the north and the south, a black leader, Roy Innis — who is national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, often referred to as "CORE" — has come up with a new approach to the problem which, strangely enough, has won some support in the south. He recognizes that the present conflict over enforced "integration" is likely to lead to more and more damage to the whole process of education for both black and white children, and believes that a different method is needed.

What Mr. Innis proposes is that two school districts be formed — one predominantly white and one predominantly black — where there now is one district. In a copyrighted interview in "U.S. News & World Report" this week, he said:

"Each district will create its own board to manage the school system. Each will hire a superintendent. Each will be autonomous and truly equal."

"To avoid getting involved in a legal battle, the district should be drawn along natural community lines. This means that in most places in America you can draw a district that would be a majority black or a majority white. It doesn't mean that you exclude one or the other race from it. If there are any whites in that black district, they will go to that black school, if they want to. If there are any blacks in the white area, they will go to that white school, if they want to."

"The result would be school systems that are predominantly black and school systems that are predominantly white. Most important of all, there would be a board with a black majority on this side and a board with a white majority on that side."

"This would be completely legal, and each group would have a chance to maximize its own resources. You would also have disengaged the two groups to reduce antagonism. We all know that the country, in general, is about to blow over one issue — integration of schools."

When asked whether he had given up on "integration," he said he is "for it, for those who want it," but that it "should not be an end in itself."

"It should be a means to an end — toward true equality and justice. But it's obvious that integration is not achieving those ends. Then you seek other means. I blame the easterners and the northerners for this emphasis on integration."

Mr. Innis, who has discussed his ideas with southern governors and other leaders, declared that the first test of the plan will probably be made in Mobile, Ala. When questioned as to what kind of reception he got in the south, he answered:

"That was very heartening to me. In the north, the eastern and northern 'liberals' chopped me up. But in the south I saw a different situation. We spoke to four governors: Governor McNair, of South Carolina; Governor Maddox, of Georgia; Governor Williams, of Mississippi, and Governor McKeithen, of Louisiana. They agreed that this plan seemed to have more viability than any other offered so far. They wanted to study it. Of course, they were cautious — and reasonably so, since the idea came from 'Core.' But the feeling I got from the governors and the state officials was that they could live with it."

"We then moved on to the local white community, and there was the same kind of reaction to the plan. They also felt that they could live with our plan."

The "Core" leader asserted that he "had to really do a lot more work" with the black people — to convince them he was not talking about restoring segregation, and show them how, under the new plan, blacks would be able to pick their own superintendent, have their own board, and manage their own resources. Most of them, he said, "agreed that it made sense," and he is directing his appeal now "to the local black community, the people who are affected by this."

Mr. Innis is convinced that the courts will accept his plan because, he pointed out, it provides for a "Unitary" system, and "there's no coercion and there's no circumvention."

He remarked that the plan would re-establish neighborhood schools and eliminate busing, except for those students who want to do it voluntarily. His conclusion is that black students would come out of these schools "ready to compete in any society."

Youth Asks Voice in Solving Problems But Turns Inward

By BRUCE BISSAT
New York Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A lot of useful ideas and information, which Washington and the nation desperately need, get quickly drowned out in today's rising flood of irrationality and unreason.

Let's just take one controversial field: The impersonality and "too-bigness" of America's institutions today, including government, the business corporations, the universities, you name it.

Everybody knows the young people are rebelling against this, but so are many adult "establishment" types — politicians of both parties, executives caught in the corporate maze, scholars.

Yet some of the most interesting notions about the problem hardly bob to the surface of the flood.

For example, John W. Gardner, chairman of the Urban Coalition and former HEW secretary, tossed in a pungent comment in a speech last fall that made news for totally different reasons.

Just at a time when so many are hollering that we need more local control, more separatism, more freedom to "do our own thing" without institutional restraint, Gardner says we may be pushing the idea much too far.

A critical reason our attacks on major urban and other crimes are failing, he says, is too much emphasis on our vaunted "pluralism."

Adds Gardner: "The role of the special interests (the means and ends) goes considerably beyond not paying much attention. Each person and each group guards with fanatic zeal the tent peg that holds its corner of the system in place — and taken all together, the innumerable vested interests frustrate and subvert plans for the common good. But a system that can't pursue its common purposes effectively will not long survive. . . . In short, pluralism needs some binding principle."

If some of that sounds like the militant kids' complaints about the system, watch out. For a recent survey of 2,000 college seniors, done for the magazine Psychology Today, showed that the outstanding trait developing among the student young is their nearly total withdrawal from institutions into the self.

Even as they approve involvement and voice a wish to do something about such problems as war, poverty and racism, they indicate an incredible turning inward.

Jeffrey K. Hadden, who analyzed the survey data, writes: "This generation rejects meaning or authority outside the self. . . . the new style of privatism. . . . fundamentally rejects their legitimacy."

What this suggests is that their involvement is largely detached and abstract, rather than personal.

Even taking part in demonstrations (and only 16 per cent of the queried seniors ever had) is only a surface kind of involvement, since most participants do not thereafter assault the problems but lay down their placards and retreat within their individual shells.

Famed sociologist David Riesman, interviewed in the same psychology magazine, points out astonishingly that college seniors tell him they seldom have more than three friends—if that.

They seem more and more to believe, he indicates, that "everything depends on one's own inner juices."

Irrationality does not appear to bother them at all. Riesman has found that many students today "are convinced that feeling is everything and that thinking has had it."

If judgments like this are valid, then the difficulty is worse than John Gardner imagines. Creaking, sometimes overbearing, institutions will hardly be improved or replaced if there is so positive a resistance to joint effort and accommodation among men and groups. And what good is joint effort anyway if those assembled have never learned the hard but indispensable discipline of thinking?

The student's withdrawal into the self is not an escape into freedom but a denial of life (including its flawed but changeable systems). Scholar Charles Frankel has it when he says our toughest problems "aren't the products of a system, unless it is the human nervous system and the human burden of history."

You have to believe that before you can deal with the real world, rather than try to hide from it.

Jack Anderson Says Nixon's Old Law Firm Is Doing Very Well in Capital

WASHINGTON — When there's loose money lying around in Washington, President Nixon's old law firm increasingly is available to help pick it up.

Take, for instance, the proposed $2.55 billion Washington subway, which had become side-tracked until the former Nixon firm got busy behind the scenes.

No one would suggest that Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander is going to get all $2.55 billion simply because President Nixon is in the White House and another former partner, John Mitchell, is Attorney General. So for the old Nixon firm has a grip only on about $200,000.

The subway is being financed in part with an $880 million bond float, and the lawyers who handle such floats are always sure of rich profits.

While the subway was in its dreaming stages, from 1966 to 1969, the New York firm of Hawkins, Delafield and Wood did a highly acceptable job of working up plans for the bond issues. But the big money was still to come.

Last June, the Hawkins, Delafield firm found out what kind of league they were playing in. Their bond man, Robert Ferdon, who was working on the Washington bond deal, jumped over to the law firm of Mudge, Rose, Mitchell had been the firm's top municipal bond attorney, and someone unquestionably was needed to step into his shoes.

Behind closed doors, partner Frank Wood of Hawkins, Delafield and Wood fought to keep the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority as a client, citing the firm's long service.

A memorandum of the meeting prepared by WMATA's general manager, Jackson Graham, states that Wood and his colleagues "were, of course, anxious to retain the Authority as a client."

But the memo, obtained by this column, ended with the story of Wood's defeat. The WMATA general manager recommended that a switch be made to Mudge, Rose. The move was officially ratified June 30.

Sudden Solutions
By an amazing coincidence, the Nixon Administration and the Washington, D.C., government, both subject to the President, swiftly began to break the logjams that had blocked the much-needed subway.

As Mudge, Rose began to work on the bond issues — which will enrich the firm a minimum of $200,000 in the next eight to ten years — the voices of discord become voices of harmony.

The city government yielded a bit to the freeway backers who had previously thwarted the subway. The congressional subcommittee also responded. After wrangling years of disagreement, the President was able to sign and announce a $1.15 billion authorization on December 9, only five months after his old law firm had been cut into the subway deal.

The "Metro" promises to be a beauty. Its 98 miles will serve both the suburbs and the inner city. No one questions its need.

Robert Ferdon explained to this column that he and the President's old law partners were "brought together by some friends." The WMATA said that Ferdon's know-how "was important enough for us to follow the man rather than the firm."

So everybody is happy. Except Hawkins, Delafield and Wood.

Anti-Pollution Runaround
If anyone outside California walked into a Ford or Chrysler showroom and ordered a new car with the advanced air pollution equipment now required by California law, he would be told he couldn't have it.

Although the devices are the best available, this column has learned that Ford and Chrysler are actively discouraging their sale outside California.

The price manuals issued by both companies to their dealers across the country state unequivocally that the special anti-pollution equipment is available on California cars only.

Furthermore, the Chrysler computer system is programmed to reject automatically an order for the equipment should one come in from one of the other 49 states.

Spokesmen for both Ford and Chrysler, nevertheless, acknowledged to this column that there was no reason why a determined buyer, willing to wait a little longer for his new car, could not obtain the special device.

Thus both companies admit they have issued false information to their dealers, which is bound to discourage the purchase of pollution control equipment. This is an ironic admission in view of the pious statements both companies have made about their desire to clean up the air.

The equipment in question is a system which curbs pollution from the evaporation of gasoline in fuel lines, tanks or carburetors. It costs about $40.

Asked why the company price manual falsely stated that the system was not available outside California, a Chrysler official could give no immediate explanation.

A Ford spokesman said the company "thought it was advisable to test this system for a year to perfect the techniques" before making the equipment available nationally.

He acknowledged, however, there was no doubt that the system worked effectively and he said no particular service problems had been encountered.

Taps for Education
The U.S. Army is killing off an educational program to the sound of music. It has cancelled all but one course for GIs taking off-campus college training at the Pentagon and Fort Myer, Va.

Even the single course had been wiped out until this column revealed that the Army had killed the education program to save $140,000 but, apparently, had plenty of money to provide the generals with GI servants. Then the one course was hastily written back into the budget as a face-saver.

There is also plenty of money for circuses. The self-glorifying Army musical extravaganza "Prelude to Taps" is being restored at a cost of $40,000 to the taxpayer. And the 120-man Army band has been sent on an $18,000 junket to Moorhead, Minn., for a band clinic.

The Army may want to order the band to play "Taps" for the hopes of its young officers and enlisted men who thought they could improve their education while at the Pentagon or Fort Myer.

Henry J. Taylor Says Soviet Is in Severe Slump

A secret document reaching our Embassy in Moscow reveals that on January 29 Politburo member Aleksandr N. Shelepin blasted the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions with new demands.

He stated: "Every possible action must be taken against absenteeism, idleness and drunkenness. Job-changers (called 'flyers' in Soviet labor jargon) must not be permitted higher pay than in their previous place, be qualified for a bonus, allowed any promotion for a year or permitted a vacation in subsidized vacation areas."

Speaking behind closed doors, the Kremlin bigwig said these orders were "to help overcome the fall in production and the current economic difficulties."

Submerged below the Soviet's false bravado, false figures and false statements, the U.S.S.R. is in a severe slump, and Shelepin was telling a truth as hidden from us as a ship sunk off Antarctica.

Shelepin runs the Soviet's so-called trade union, for there is only one, completely government-controlled. Green baize surrounded the listening stooges. The Communist hierarchy uses it everywhere in their offices. It's their symbol of business efficiency. They delight in green baize the way cats love cream. And again and again you will find them avoiding the truth because it is simply too dangerous.

Their glittering announcements, in turn, shield the real facts. In a Soviet-Austrian-Italian consortium, the U.S.S.R. is extending by a glamorous 251-pipeline its line from the Ukraine, through Czechoslovakia to Italy's E.N.I. state-monopoly installation near Tarvisio, Italy. The Soviet Ambassador to Rome was photographed there, shouting this news of Soviet progress.

Within hours after West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and French President Pompidou announced in Paris on February 3 joint efforts to improve Eastern relations, Moscow shouted that the Soviet had signed a 20-year natural gas sales agreement worth $683 million in exchange for West German steel pipes. Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin himself, he with the black gumdrop eyes, led the announcement whoopla.

But the secret Shelepin document shows how critically—even dangerously—the Soviet is over a barrel.

The document begins with a highly classified and unreported statement in December to the Central Committee of the Supreme Soviet by Communist Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev warning that they have all wandered into a mine field. He describes what he calls the "serious insufficiencies" of the national economy. Then Brezhnev lists a long sequence of calamitous misjudgments.

He calls them "largely irredeemable." He declares, moreover, that they plague the U.S.S.R. "at the very moment when the 1971-1976 development plan is being prepared." Then came the crusher. Brezhnev confided that the calamitous misjudgments now force a drastic lowering of the plan's targets. And the document closes with the alarmed endorsement of Commissar Nikolay Baybakov, the Chairman of Gosplan, the government's planning agency, and Vasily Garbuzov, Minister of Finance.

When Shelepin revealed this he included all particulars. The Kremlin internally compiles its statistics in 13 major categories. These are: national revenue, total industrial output, rail and river transportation of total freight, agricultural production, electric energy, timber, oil, steel, chemicals, building materials, paper, meat, metal plant-machinery production.

Steel output is in such a drastic snafu that the Kremlin has been forced to sell gold in immense amounts to buy Western European steel, as this column reported on January 12. And agriculture is in a crisis. For example, last year's cereal production fell nine million tons below 1968 and there is a near-collapse in potato and beet sugar output. Shoe production, in turn, has now fallen to less than one pair per person per year.

But the secret document shows that not only these sections of the economy but every single one of the 13 Kremlin categories is—without exception—off from the previous year and heading down at a relentless, cumulative rate.

You are lost when dealing with the Communists unless you realize that they can be cunning and stupid at the same time. The Soviet leaders regularly underestimate us—they who call us greedy economic animals who live only for what we consume. They as regularly overestimate themselves. They are often stupid, or just too, too clever, which often comes to the same thing. But why pay attention to the propaganda from the Soviet paradise, or guess what's what? Here it is from the horses' mouths.

Freeman Readers Write Letters to the Editor

Kingston, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1970
Landmarks Preservation
Editor, The Freeman:

The following remarks are occasioned by current concern with the future of civic design in the uptown area of Kingston. The Historic District in the uptown area can provide very positive benefits in the way of preservation of the noteworthy buildings that are part of the city's unique heritage. After a too-long period of time, many 19th century structures are finally getting public recognition, thus acknowledging the city's collection of architecture that extends back over a period of almost three centuries.

It should be pointed out that the variety presented by these buildings is due to the fact that each, in its time of construction, was considered a "modern" building. At its inception, each building was built according to the acceptable means of construction and standards of design in its time. It would therefore be illogical to stop a progression of architectural expression at any arbitrarily selected moment. Had this been done in the 18th century, the uptown area would not be possessed of range of building design that it has today. It has been publicly stated that modern architecture dates itself, while some historical style from the past, namely so-called colonial, is timeless. If we follow the latter line of thinking in terms of contemporary construction, we will soon be living in a wax works of a Disneyland East, complete with hitching post parking meters. Colonial architecture ceased to be taken seriously by the leaders of the profession and the architecture titioners are few, and it is the style that is truly dated. America's great contributions to the history of architecture began in the 19th century, and are very much in a process of development at this time.

The problems of civic design facing the uptown area are many and somewhat complex. The expanded park area around the Senate House would be a significant contribution. I can think of two architects in the area who have suggested to the Urban Renewal Agency that the existing 19th century buildings on Wall St. be returned to their original appearance. However, to speak of the entire Stockade area as a "restoration" area is quit, misleading, insofar as the history of uptown construction covers much too long a period of time to be "restored" to any one arbitrarily selected point in time. Large scale problems facing the uptown area include the means for true physical unification of the old commercial area and the Plaza, in order to create a coherent retailing entity that can effectively compete with the fast-growing peripheral shopping centers.

Compatibility of new construction with worthy older buildings is an important problem that has received considerable attention from progressive architects and architectural historians. Some local examples of successful juxtapositions would include the Fair St. Reformed Church religious education building and the religious education building on Huguenot St. in New Paltz. Elsewhere, the new Boston city hall is hailed in the newspaper of the National Trust for Historic Preservation as "a next link in the chain that binds past to future." The National Trust's appraisal further states that "... Twentieth Century Boston was not content to duplicate government halls of the past, by putting the design and materials of earlier city halls into the IBM machine and pulling out a pseudo architectural style assemblage of red brick, stone, small-paneled windows and columns." Promising standards to allow the successful juxtaposition of new and old buildings have been developed in recent years in Venice, and adopted in this country by the architecturally rich city of Savannah, Georgia, and in Britain by the superbly endowed city of Bath. These standards relate buildings in terms of recognizable architectural elements of a general nature, such as height, proportion, materials, window sizes, etc. Robert Stipe, an Attorney teaching at the University of North Carolina, states in an article for the National Trust, that such recognizable standards based on fair criteria will minimize dangers of favoritism and arbitrary treatment. Such standards are a matter of simple fairness in dealing with property owners, and enable them to know with reasonable certainty where they stand with respect to some standard conduct in building new structures. These standards should be established to allow a range of architectural expressions, rather than forcing mere imitation or fakery.

Any attempt to curl up in an architectural womb of our great republic is obviously going to be unproductive in terms of solving today's problems. Certainly the only answer to contemporary civic design problems is to provide the very best contemporary solutions possible. The writer is a resident and practicing architect in Kingston, and is the architect member of the Landmarks Preservation Commission of the City of Kingston.

Episcopal Peace Exhibit

Editor, The Freeman
As people who chose to live in Woodstock more than a year ago, we have always been impressed by the community exhibits featured in the window of our town's branch of the National Bank of Orange and Ulster Counties. We were especially pleased when we saw this week's exhibit of the Episcopal Peace Fellowship at a time when we earnestly believe that all Americans must support our Government's steps toward peace in Paris, in this country and in Vietnam.

But we were dismayed to learn that this peace window was to be dismantled because of pressure brought to bear upon the bank by a group of townspeople who objected, or so they said, to children being exposed to the "violence" of the photographs in the display. Yet, as your front-page story proved, such pictures have been seen by American children for years in LIFE, LOOK, THE NEW YORK TIMES and other conservative publications. American children have been exposed to much more shocking violence in the daily reporting of the Vietnam war on their TV screens. And saddest of all, American children have been exposed to the violence of war, deaths and war mutilations among their own fathers, brothers, uncles, cousins and friends who are casualties of this senseless war. It is precisely to PROTECT our children from such continuing and future violence that peace displays are made!

We are therefore compelled to come to the following conclusion, about these townspeople who hypocritically objected to the display:

- 1) that they did so because in reality they do not care if war's violence continues.
- 2) that, unlike Mrs. Blair and Mrs. Bernard who arranged the exhibit, they are either afraid or ashamed to give their names to a reporter as freely as they give their opinions when they succeed, undemocratically, in preventing the showing by a religious organization of its peace display, and
- 3) that in the last analysis they do not support their Government's efforts for peace and therefore protest all evidence of such support from others.

Very truly yours,
JANE and NED LEHAC

No Democrat Seen Emerging As Clear Top Vote-Getter for '72

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 21—President Nixon holds a commanding lead over each of four possible Democratic rivals, with none of these Democrats as yet clearly emerging as his party's strongest vote-getter.

The four Democrats matched against President Nixon and George Wallace, third party candidate in the 1968 election, are Sen. Edmund Muskie, Sen. Edward Kennedy, former Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Eugene McCarthy. These men were recently selected as the top nomination choices for 1972 in a Gallup survey of the nation's Democrats.

President Nixon holds a 47 to 35 per cent lead over Muskie, a 49 to 35 per cent lead over Kennedy, a 50 to 33 per cent lead over Humphrey, and a 55 to 24 per cent lead over McCarthy.

Wallace Vote Holding Up
Support for Wallace, the American Independent party candidate in 1968, shows no signs of fading, contrary to the usual pattern of support for defeated third party candidates.

Wallace won 13.5 per cent of the vote nationwide in the 1968 election—32.6 per cent of the vote in the 13 Southern states and 7.9 per cent outside the South.

Wallace's vote in the trial heat against Nixon and Humphrey closely matches his performance in the election. He wins 30 per cent of the vote in South and 7 per cent outside the South.

Wallace's vote in the South surpasses the vote given any of the four Democrats tested in this survey. He leads Humphrey in this region, 30 to 25 per cent; Muskie, 28 to 23 per cent; Kennedy 27 to 21 per cent, and McCarthy, 28 to 19 per cent.

On the other hand, he trails President Nixon by sizable margins in the case of each trial heat.

Details of Survey
A total of 1,173 registered voters were interviewed in more than 300 mathematically selected localities across the nation. Interviews were conducted in person by trained field workers during the period Jan. 30-Feb. 2.

Following is the question wording:

To get some idea of the national political situation at this early stage, suppose the presidential election were being held today. If Richard Nixon were the Republican candidate and (name of Democratic candidate) were the Democratic candidate and George Wallace ran again as a third party candidate, which would you like to see win?

President Pompidou Talks: Much Cordiality Is Shown

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon and French President Georges Pompidou today concluded their discussions in an air of cordiality which tended to obscure the fact that they were still considerably apart on a number of critical issues—particularly the Middle East.

Diplomats on both sides are grateful for the improved atmosphere between Washington and Paris during the past year because it makes it easier to discuss problems. However, they are aware the two countries view some issues differently.

Pompidou was scheduled to leave today for Cape Kennedy, Fla. after conferring late this morning with Nixon — the second extended talk they have had in two days.

On the Middle East, they agreed it was most important to work for peace because the conflict there always poses the peril of a Soviet-American confrontation which could explode into an East-West war.

However, behind the scenes, highly placed French and American informants made it clear the two countries differ on the exact status Israel should demand in the area and the extent of the peril rising from France's decision to ship 110 Mirage jet warplanes to Libya.

The U.S. government was successful in its effort to make the Pompidou visit a gala affair. Anti-French demonstrations were of very minor proportions and Secretary of State William F. Rogers expressed the hope Wednesday "nothing happens" elsewhere on Pompidou's five-day U.S. tour that is "in any way unpleasant."

After a formal dinner at the French Embassy — broiled lobster from Maine was the appetizer and lamb from the south of France was the entrée — Nixon and Pompidou exchanged good wishes Wednesday night.

Nixon said the discussions "will produce the results in terms of real progress on fundamental issues that we want." Pompidou said "I have been moved by the welcome which I have received from every body — from all the American authorities, from congressmen and from all the people I have met."

Pompidou was apologetic for his declaration before Congress supporting Nixon's Vietnam policy. His praise was forestalled since the French steadfastly have urged the United States to pull out of what Paris regards as a hopeless affair.

The French President said "the end of the war in Vietnam for the United States, will be the most precious of victories — a victory was first over oneself." Some congressmen felt this had the ring of advice to a drunk halfway to sobriety, but it appeared to be taken in good spirit.

Mark Rothko Dies, Noted As Great Artist

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pioneer abstract expressionist Mark Rothko died of apparently self-inflicted wounds in his Manhattan studio Wednesday. Rothko, 66, was considered by many one of the greatest artists of his generation.

Rothko, whose name was Marcus Rothkovich, was born Sept. 25, 1903, in Russia and immigrated to the United States with his father, a pharmacist in 1913, and settled in Portland, Ore.

He went to Yale in 1921, but left after two years and finally wound up in New York, where he began taking formal artistic training at the Art Students League. His paintings were first shown in a group exhibition in 1929.

It wasn't until the 1940's his work began to absorb surrealistic influence. His first one-man show was at Peggy Guggenheim's Art of This Century Gallery.

By the late 1940's his art had assumed the completely abstract forms it followed until his death.

Rothko also taught art for most of his life. From 1929 until 1952 he taught children at the Center Academy in Brooklyn and in the summers of 1947 and 1949 he taught at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

Although his early career was marked by struggle and lack of recognition, his fortunes rose as abstract expressionism became better known in the works of Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning and Robert Motherwell.

Rothko had a heart attack a year ago and friends said he had been despondent since then. He was found dead in his studio Wednesday with his wrists slashed and the Chief Medical Examiner's office listed his death as suicide.

Hears Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The special Army board investigating the alleged My Lai massacre heard 40 minutes of testimony Wednesday from Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr., the Army's second in command in Vietnam when the incident happened.

No comment was made on Palmer's testimony. He was the highest ranking officer called to testify so far in the Army's investigation.

Teachers Ratify The N.J. Pact

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—Newark teachers ratified by acclamation Wednesday night a new contract with the city, ending the longest school strike in New Jersey's history.

Union officials announced immediately after the vote approving the $3.5 million contract that teachers would go back to their classrooms today.

The settlement granted an average salary hike of $2,200, establishing a range of $8,000 for beginning teachers to $13,100 for experienced teachers with a bachelor's degree.

The money issue was settled shortly after the strike began, but positions hardened on both sides over the question of settling grievances and promotions by seniority.

Demonstration Is Broken Up

MANILA (UPI)—Riot police tonight broke up an anti-American demonstration in front of the U.S. Embassy by 1,000 youths who hurled explosives at policemen on duty. The youths then roamed through the Ermita district near the embassy attacking parked cars and shop windows.

They staged a brief sitdown but the 100 riot police on duty drove them off with teargas and by firing their guns into the air.

Dispersed into small groups the rioters roamed through the Ermita district known for its hotels, bars and restaurants where they smashed windows, hurled bottles filled with gunpowder, and threw rocks at policemen and news photographers.

At least three persons, including one policeman, were injured as the rioters smashed windows high above the plywood barricades Manila Hilton Hotel. They also exploded bombs on the concrete canopy at the entrance to the Philippine-owned hotel.

The students' explosive anti-American slogans and demand for government reform. They planned this demonstration before an announcement that an American security guard had shot and killed a Filipino trying to break into a building at Clark Air Force base Wednesday.

Woman Told Her Husband Is No Prisoner

PARIS (UPI)—Hand diplomats told Mrs. John O'Grady of Las Vegas, Nev., and her seven children today their Air Force husband and father is not a prisoner in North Vietnam.

The O'Grady were the first family to receive a direct answer to their queries by coming to Paris. It meant, apparently that Lt. Col. John O'Grady, shot down over North Vietnam in 1967, is dead.

"It hurts," Mrs. O'Grady said. She was in tears as she told newsmen the North Vietnamese had had an answer ready for her.

The O'Grady met them for approximately 25 minutes in the permanent Hanoi Diplomatic Legation on the Left Bank of the city.

Mrs. O'Grady said the Hanoi officials told her they had made an investigation into her case and her husband definitely was not among their prisoners.

"They said it was up to our government to say if that meant he was dead," she said.

Rabbi Going to Israel Meet

KINGSTON — Rabbi Jonathan Eichhorn, spiritual leader of Temple Emanuel, who was recently named co-chairman of the 1970 Kingston Jewish Welfare Campaign, will get a first hand view of Israel in the next two weeks.

He leaves shortly to attend the annual meeting of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, from March 1 to 11. This year's meeting is being held at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Theme will be Back to Scopus with approximately 600 Reform rabbis meeting to hear leaders of Israel including Premier Golda Meir and Ambassador Abba Eban.

They will visit many places of particular interest to Jewish religious leaders on their guided tour of Israel.

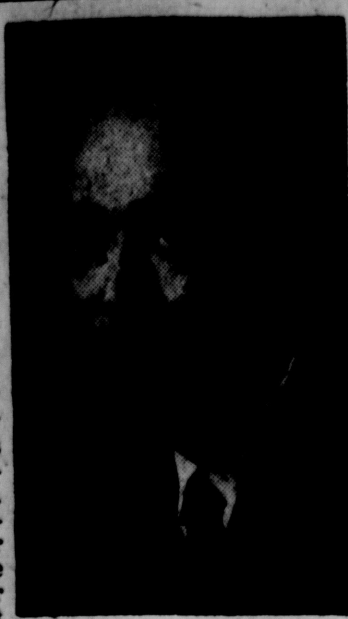

His appointment as co-chairman of the local United Jewish Welfare Fund was announced this week by Charles S. Ronder, general chairman of the campaign.

Rabbi Eichhorn has served as spiritual leader of Congregation Temple Emanuel since September, 1965, succeeding Rabbi Herbert Bloom who served the congregation for 33 years. Rabbi Eichhorn is a graduate of Adelphi University having received his B.A. degree in history in 1967. He was ordained at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, Ohio in 1962 where he was awarded his Master of Arts Degree in Hebrew Letters.

As an Army Chaplain, Rabbi Eichhorn served in Germany from 1962 to 1965. Since coming to Kingston, he has been active in many community and civic activities and has frequently spoken before religious and educational groups in the Kingston area. He is the son of Rabbi David Eichhorn who recently retired from the National Jewish Welfare Board after serving that organization for 25 years.

He is married to the former Susanne Schwartz and is the father of two children, Deborah Lynn and Sharon Beth.

"The State of Israel was born of a Jewish determination never to bow down again, to recreate a land we could call our own," Rabbi Eichhorn stated in accepting the appointment. "Now Israel finds herself on all sides surrounded by belligerent enemies vowed to destroy her. While she is spending her citizen's lives, we must spend our money in her support to provide the many welfare services her own burden of defense cannot provide."

Two Injured In Area Mishap

TOWN OF CAIRO

Two persons were injured in a tractor-car collision Wednesday on Route 32 in this Greene County town.

Trooper Robert Sprague of Leeds reported James Van Alstine, 33, of Perryville, was driving a tractor north on the highway when a car driven by Rose Belluscio, 50, of Port Chester, attempted a left turn into a driveway. The vehicles collided.

The woman sustained contusions of the legs. A passenger in her car, 24-year-old Linda Peterson of Saugerties, received contusions of the knees and left leg. Van Alstine suffered sprains of both wrists, authorities said.

UPA Price Change

The price of Lily of the Valley Bartlett pears listed in the UPA grocery advertisement in Wednesday's Freeman should have read three 16-ounce cans for 80 cents and not as shown.

EXPENSIVE PAINTINGS—An anonymous buyer broke the world auction record for a painting by Dutch impressionist Vincent Van Gogh (bottom), by paying $1.35 million for a landscape from a famous California collection. The top Van Gogh sales price was for "The Cypress and Tree in Flower." A European dealer paid $875,000 for "The Plowman." Both the Van Goghs were from the estate of the late banker W. W. Crocker, a member of a pioneer San Francisco family and founder of the San Francisco Museum of Art. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Justice Reilly said an adjournment was granted because Katrine Realty Corp., owner of the motel and apartment complex retained a new attorney to handle the case. Senate, Assembly at Odds On 18-Year-Old Question

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI)—In a replay of the Blaine Amendment impasse, the Senate and Assembly were at odds today when to give the vote to 18-year-olds.

Each house approved the proposal of its Republican leader Wednesday to extend suffrage, but the bills included different timetables.

Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges' proposal, passed 54-3, would drop the age to 18 for the 1972 elections.

But under Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea's bill, approved 79-78 with near-solid Democratic opposition, the voting age would be lowered to 18 in three stages by 1980.

Duryea says he favors lowering the age to 18 but maintains the gradual reduction is the best way to assure voter approval. His bill would reduce the voting age to 20 in 1971, to 19 in 1975 and finally 18 in 1979.

Democrats backed an amendment by Assemblyman Eli Wager, D-Woodmere, to implement the 1972 proposal, but lost, 71-78.

Opponents called the Duryea plan a "cop out" and reminded colleagues that both President Nixon and Governor Rockefeller have proposed immediate reductions.

Asked if the leaders would seek a compromise this year rather than pass both plans, Duryea smiled and said, "Oh, I presume there will be a few discussions."

The proposed constitutional amendment must be re-approved by the 1971 legislature, then go on the November, 1971 ballot.

The Blaine amendment deadlock developed last week when the houses passed conflicting versions of the measure to repeal the 76-year-old ban on state aid to non public schools. That issue has yet to be resolved.

This year was the first time the Senate had approved 18-year-old voting, and the common in both houses with youth campaign workers than was Sen. Samuel D. Greenberg, D-Brooklyn.

Two of the opponents in the Senate, John J. Marchi, R-Stat-en Island, and Sen. John H. Hughes, R-Syracuse, said they wanted accompanying measures to give the 18-year-olds other legal responsibilities. The other more interested in securing opponent, without explanation, was Sen. Samuel D. Greenberg, D-Brooklyn.

Goodell Asks Inquiry Into Slaying of Vietnamese

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., today asked for an investigation by the Senate Armed Services Committee into an eyewitness account of the alleged murder of 19 South Vietnamese women and children by American soldiers.

The allegations of former Army Spec. 1 James D. Henry, now a student at Valley State Junior College in Los Angeles, were contained in a magazine article.

Goodell called "most shocking" the portrayal by Henry of the alleged actions of a company of the 35th Infantry during February, 1968. Goodell also released a letter he wrote Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird in January about additional alleged massacres involving American troops.

Goodell asked Laird to determine if there was any factual basis to reports by Women's Strike for Peace that during February and March of 1969 the revolutionary government of South Vietnam.

The Goodell letter also alleged that on Feb. 23, 1969, the Kong Ho Rinh pacification camp was bombed and strafed, killing 350 persons, and four women were tortured to death by the provisional government of South Vietnam.

in Thu Duc District near Saigon.

"I do not vouchsafe that these massacres actually took place, but I do think it imperative that all of these allegations receive the closest investigation possible by responsible authorities."

Elephant Attacks

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP)

Police patrolling near the border with Zambia were attacked by an angry bull elephant. With the elephant in hot pursuit, the police reversed their Land Rover for 30 yards along a narrow track until stopped by a tree, then fled into the bush. From a safe distance they watched the elephant roll the vehicle over and drive his tusks through it several times. "Then he presumed the Land Rover to be dead and ambled off," said one of the policemen.

Congressman Calls for Arabs To Take Full Responsibility

ELLENVILLE — Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., has called for the Airlines Pilots Association, and the International Air Transport Association to demand Arab nations assume full responsibility for the acts of their nationals. He made his remarks recently at a meeting of B'nai B'rith at Ellenville.

Congressman Fish, deploring the recent acts of suspected sabotage against Swiss and Austrian airlines scheduled for Israel, also said that the area of prevention of such acts of terror was also an area for action by the United Nations organization.

"With the two attacks on civilian aircraft, plus the recent machine gunning of an American tour bus by Arab terrorists, there is little doubt the entire Middle East is teetering on the edge of another major war outbreak," he said.

Fish also told the B'nai B'rith members that he had recently joined in a sense of Congress resolution opposing the French sale of 100 jet fighters to Libya.

The congressman who has been voicing his deep concern over the deteriorating Middle East situation since his election, was among the first to question the apparent change of our foreign policy in that vital area as first voiced by Secretary of State William P. Rogers on Dec. 9.

New 'Formula' Unveiled for Panther Pretrial Hearing

NEW YORK (UPI)—State Supreme Court Justice John M. Murtagh unveiled a new "formula" Wednesday to maintain order in the pretrial hearings for 13 Black Panthers charged with a bombing conspiracy.

He recessed the proceedings "indefinitely" and said he would consider a written motion to resume the hearings only if it was accompanied by "an unequivocal assurance that the defendants are now prepared to participate in a trial under the American system of criminal justice."

Three weeks of continued disruption prompted the judge's action and the devising of his "formula" to deal with it. He warned the six defense lawyers Tuesday he had developed a formula which he said he would implement in about two weeks.

But when some of the defendants entered the courtroom Wednesday shaking their fists and shouting, "power to the people," Murtagh said "the continued misconduct persuades me to use the formula without further delay."

"The court declares the proceedings recessed indefinitely," he said. "The hearings are proceeding at a snail's pace and are continually being interrupted. The defendants are unwilling to proceed . . . the court has no alternative."

After Murtagh recessed the hearings indefinitely Wednesday, four of the defense lawyers held a news conference and said they had frequently admonished their clients "to conform to the standard courtroom behavior." They said they warned the Panthers to speak only when asked questions. The lawyers said the Panthers refused to be silent, however.

"This recess is probably a milestone in judicial history," said defense lawyer Charles T. Kinney. "We intend to be careful in framing our response as Murtagh was in forming his little formula."

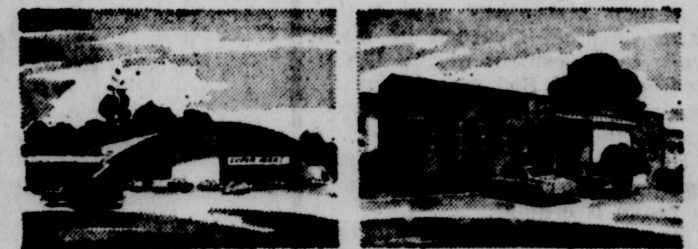

The Panthers are charged in an alleged plot to kill policemen and bomb public facilities including department stores, subways and the Bronx Botanical Garden.

"The recent developments in that critical area are, I believe, far the most dangerous developments since the June 1967 Six Day War. The area is ripe for another explosion," Fish concluded adding he was urging the administration to comply with the request of Israel for additional jet fighters to restore balance in that area.

Bishops Get Plan for Six New Dioceses

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A plan to create six new dioceses in upstate New York will be presented to the State Conference of Bishops by the Most Rev. Edwin Broderick, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Albany, a spokesman confirmed Wednesday.

The Committee on Episcopal Succession presented the proposal to Bishop Broderick last July. The committee is a group of laymen and clergy. No date has been set for the bishops' meeting.

A committee leader the Rev. F. Gerard McCloskey, said that if the plan were approved it would create new dioceses with headquarters at Poughkeepsie, Utica, Binghamton, Plattsburgh, Watertown, and Olean-Jamestown.

The diocese of Ogdensburg would be dissolved, he said. It is the largest in area of the eight in the state.

Father McCloskey said the proposal has a twofold aim: to bring the church into the same frame of reference as its congregation's daily lives and to overcome what he called "pastoral neglect."

The present diocesan organization was set up in 1886 when the bishopric of Syracuse was added. He said it does not accurately reflect modern population distribution.

Commenting about fragmented areas, he mentioned the Utica vicinity that has three dioceses — Albany, Syracuse and Ogdensburg.

But, he said, a diocese ought to be organized within a community that its members work in, read newspapers in and generally center their lives about.

Father McCloskey said that John Cardinal Dearden of Detroit, the president of the U.S. Conference of Bishops, recently assured him that his group would also consider the plan.

He said if the state bishops approve, the Vatican would likely make it official.

Three Killed As Cars Collide On Upstate Road

OWEGO, N.Y. (AP) — Three Newark Valley persons died late Wednesday night in a head-on collision along Route 38 when one car wandered in the wrong lane during blowing snow.

Authorities said the three victims were the only ones in the two cars in the accident about five miles north of the Southern Tier village of Owego.

The victims were Prescilla J. Baldwin, 43; Gordon L. Struble, 42, and his wife, Gloria, 40.

Tioga County Sheriff's deputies said Mrs. Baldwin's car had wandered into the left lane along a slippery area of the road on a winding curve.

The impact of the cars reversed the direction of the Struble auto and sent it off the road. Mrs. Baldwin's car went off the road on the opposite side. She was ejected and was pronounced dead at the scene. The Strubles were pronounced dead on arrival at Ideal Hospital in Endicott.

New State Guidelines Proposed by Stratton

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said Wednesday guidelines set up by New York State to prevent destruction of lakes and fish life actually would encourage thermal pollution.

The congressman told the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy the guidelines espoused last year by the administration of Gov. Nelson

A. Rockefeller had "failed to measure up to the test."

They actually would "encourage thermal pollution in New York State and would permit a nuclear power plant to be operated on Cayuga Lake without adequate protection against the destruction of the lake itself," Stratton said.

The congressman urged enactment of the tight federal standards to prevent the destruction of small lakes, not recognized as interstate waters, by heated discharges from nuclear powered electric generating plants.

"The threat of thermal pollution is certainly far greater in a small inland lake like Cayuga Lake than it is in the ocean," Stratton declared.

He said "under present law the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration would have no authority to move in this area at all."

Stratton called for federal legislation "that will require that all new nuclear powered generating plants shall, before they can be constructed, be designed with appropriate cooling facilities to prevent thermal pollution of the surrounding water."

ASCS—Farm Program Diversion Also Will Benefit Public and Economy

THE CENSUS...A Close Look

Editor's Note—This is the first in a two-part special series on the upcoming Federal census.

By LYNN MULVANEY
KINGSTON

Every 10 years Americans take a close look at themselves.

The occasion is the census of population and housing conducted once every decade as required by the Constitution.

The 1970 census, about to get underway, is the 19th in a series stretching back without interruption to 1790.

Why does Uncle Sam want to know how many bathrooms you have? Why does he want to know if you have a battery-operated radio?

It is because the statistical story, written by American families, is a vital one. Data from census questionnaires when collected, computerized and tabulated will tell the nation in what geographical areas we are making steady progress in attaining economic and social goals of which the country can be proud. The census tells us what we are as a nation and is a necessary stock-taking.

For the average American census will be a simple exercise. Every household will be asked to fill out its own questionnaire. Most questions will be answered by filling a small circle with pencil to make a black dot. The position of the dot indicates whether a person is male or female, is head of the household or wife of the head, etc. The dots can be read and the information can be recorded by electronic instruments which do not read handwriting.

In most counties, like Ulster, census takers will call at every home to pick up the filled-out questionnaire and at every 15th household to ask additional questions. In areas where people are asked to mail back forms, census takers will call on families that fail to respond by mail or fail to answer all questions.

For 80 per cent of the households there will be about 23 questions and for the other 20 per cent there will be an average of 69 questions.

Stressing the confidential nature of the census operation, the bureau points out that personal identification items, such as name and address, are withheld when other items are fed into the computers. This means that no person, no family, no housing unit is identifiable in the resulting statistical output. Furthermore, no other government agency may examine individual census records for any purpose whatsoever.

Who determines what questions will be asked in the census?

Congress has vested in the Secretary of Commerce and through him, the Census Bureau, the authority for determining the inquiries and the preparation of the questionnaires.

Each time a decennial census is planned, a flood of letters comes to the Census Bureau proposing a wide variety of questions. Among the recently suggested queries, none of which was accepted, were:

Have you ever been in an automobile accident?

Do you belong to a union? Which one?

Do you believe in God?

Do you smoke cigarettes? Cigars? When did you begin smoking?

Do you hold more than one job?

What is your overall tax bill? Obviously these questions do not meet the guidelines established by Congress.

A new question being introduced in some of the questionnaires this year asks, "In April 1965 was this person—working at a job or business (full or part time)? In Armed Forces? Attending school or college?" Data from this question will be used in distinguishing streams of migration based on movement into and out of the labor force, into and out of the Armed Forces, into and out of college. The responses, the bureau contends, will help shape programs for utilizing available manpower.

A look at the local census bureau operation and the people involved in it will appear in the concluding installment.

Chamber Warns On 'Easy Money'

KINGSTON

The Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce warned residents today to think twice before accepting offers that promise easy money while working at home.

Len Cane, executive vice president of the Chamber, said this kind of promotion often appeals to those who can least afford to lose money—the elderly, shut-ins, widows, and others who cannot seek regular employment.

According to the National Better Business Bureau, with which the Chamber is affiliated through membership, these schemes frequently appear in the classified columns of newspapers and magazines and promise employment such as mailing and addressing postcards, assembly, conducting research, and sewing.

According to NBBB's leaflet, "Homework Schemes," the offers all have one thing in common—the requirement of buying something from the advertiser, whose interest is in the sale of goods, literature, instructions or services, not in providing income for persons who apply.

One type of scheme, says NBBB, is an offer to sell materials and instructions for making products at home, with the promise to repurchase the finished product. However, finished work is invariably rejected as "not up to our standard."

The sale of breeding animals on a promise to buy back the offspring is another homework scheme. The animals are usually sold for much more than they are worth. The promoter declines repurchasing practically all animals as not being

"in healthy, marketable condition."

Offers of earning money by supplying opinions by mail for "research" are also a part of homework picture. NBBB says the applicant is required to pay an enrollment fee of $5 or $10. Based on hundreds of complaints concerning this kind of offer, payments for opinions seldom reaches the amount of the enrollment fee, according to NBBB.

However, NBBB points out there are some firms that offer sound homework employment and that they are not known to require any payment or fee from homeworkers.

Anyone who wants to start a home business can obtain information by writing to the Small Business Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce for bulletins 95 and 98.

NBBB's leaflet on homework schemes provides tips on evaluating offers of earning money at home. It may be ordered by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the National Better Business Bureau, 230 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Will Give Lecture to Paltz Study Group

IRVING J. WEISS

On Tuesday, March 3, Irving J. Weiss, English and World Literature teacher, will present a lecture demonstration entitled "Visual Imagery in the Mass Media" to members of New Paltz Study Club after the 6:30 p.m. covered dish supper at Reformed Church in New Paltz.

Professor Weiss, who teaches courses in mass media studies as well as in literature, has been interested for many years in the relation between verbal and non-verbal forms of thinking, and in the uses of technology, especially in the work of the artistic avant-garde. His forthcoming translation of Malcolm de Chazal's SENS-PLASTIQUE, to be published by Herder and Herder later this year, is devoted to the interchangeability of the forms and objects of sense perceptions. Mr. Weiss has published articles and poems in many literary and professional magazines, and he has read from his work on WBAI-FM in New York City. He also helped produce multi-media programs guest speaker at New York University on March 17 for the course The New Arts, on the subject "The Photograph and the Cartoon."

The covered dish supper, traditionally a popular event, will offer gourmet dishes which should satisfy the tastes of all. Members are requested to contact Mrs. William Dietz, chairman of the dinner arrangements. Miss Myra Gerald and Miss Marion Harding will be hostesses for the occasion.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

YWCA Plans Special 'Day Out' for Women

The YWCA of Kingston, 209 Clinton Avenue, invites women of the community to participate in an interesting and diversified "day out", to be held on Thursday, March 5, from 9:30 a.m. till 2 p.m.

An informal day, with supervised and inexpensive baby sitting, will provide women with an excellent opportunity to learn a new craft, hear thorough discussions on indigenous problems, enjoy games, sports, and the company of contemporaries. Several notable speakers will address the group—Paul Treanor, Director of the Family Service Center, will lead an informal discussion on "Family Problems" from 10 to 11 a.m. Robert Steuding of Ulster County Community College will recount the dangers of pollution on our environment from 11 a.m. to 12 noon. Mrs. Louis Breitung of the Home Economics Extension Bureau will give a fascinating program dramatizing the changes in women's fashions since 1850. Using slides to illustrate, Mrs. Breitung will show how clothing has adapted as women's roles have changed over the last century.

On the lighter side, Mrs. June Munson will demonstrate macramé, (the art of decorative knot-tying), and arranging of dried flowers; Mrs. Jean Keator will show a variety of 'knitting techniques, very much in vogue today; hairpin lace will be taught by Mrs. Kathy Bisaccio; and Mrs. Alice Valentine will demonstrate many delightful craft projects limited only by one's own imagination.

Coffee, tea and cookies will be served throughout the day; guests are asked to tote their own bag lunches—beverages will be provided. Baby-sitting will be provided at the First Baptist Church, Albany Avenue, at a nominal fee for the day or hour.

Card tables will be set up in the main lobby of the "Y" for enthusiasts, and the usual reduced rate day-time bowling will also be offered.

Additional Funds for Philharmonic

The Community Mixed Chorus has donated more than $300 to the Hudson Valley Philharmonic Society's sustaining fund drive, according to W.G. Springer, general manager of the Society.

A total of $346.50 was contributed by individual members of the chorus, led by music director Albert Hunter. The local performing group is headed by Robert Potter and presents seasonal concert in the area.

In another development, Springer announced the endorsement of the Philharmonic's current fund campaign by New York City's radio station WQXR, broadcasting division of The New York Times.

A letter received from Walter Neiman, vice president and general manager of WQXR, offered to broadcast special announcements and statements seeking support for the orchestra.

"I am impressed both with the scope of your musical endeavor and your effort to preserve it," Neiman wrote, "and I am delighted to join in your efforts to maintain a valuable and essential cultural service in your community."

The Society's Sustaining Fund Drive, now in its third week, is seeking to raise $75,000 from residents of the Ulster - Dutchess - Orange counties area to enable the Philharmonic to continue and expand its many musical and educational activities.

Phase I of the drive, aimed at corporations and industries, is headed in Ulster County by Allan G. Atherton. Phase II, a volunteer door-to-door campaign, was organized by the orchestra's music director, Claude Montoux, and is chaired by Mrs. Eleanor Diemer in Ulster County.

PHILHARMONIC FUND DRIVE CONTINUES — Mrs. W. G. Springer (R) is serving as a captain in Ulster County for Hudson Valley Philharmonic Society's sustaining fund drive. Assisting her is (L-R) Mrs. W. Wendell Hoover and Mrs. Samuel Ruchman.

Panel Discussion

Ralph O. Clarkson, Director of Admissions at Hartwick College, Oneonta, will participate in a panel discussion on College Admissions and Programs at the Kingston High School this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Clarkson will review the programs of study available at Hartwick College and the admissions practices of the institution. Hartwick is a private, liberal arts coeducational college with an enrollment exceeding 1,600 students.

Both parents and students are invited.

Hints From Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Why make buttonholes in the cotton liners of your glass fiber drapes? I hemmed the top and bottom of each lining, then I marked the place on the lining where the drapery hook would go.

Instead of making buttonholes, I used my eyelet tool and punched a metal eyelet where the back of each metal pleat hook went.

Then, I put the glass fiber drapes on the front of the hook, and the lining at each eyelet on the back of the hook... and hung as usual.

So simple!

Mrs. W. Coenelius

Dear Heloise:

I have found the best curler container ever. It's an old purse that I was going to throw away.

I keep my hair curlers in the bottom part, my hair net in the little pocket inside the purse, and my clips attached to the pocket. My comb, mirror, hairpins, and setting gel all fit inside. Real handy when traveling, too.

Mrs. S. Hasty

If you like large house plants, but don't like the price you have to pay for those large planters, try using inexpensive, galvanized mop buckets.

You can spray-paint them to match any decor, glue decals on them, add fringe, or even create a free-hand design with string or decorative scraps.

Don't remove the handles because they make it easier to move the plants.

I have found other inexpensive items in a second-hand store that make ideal planters. One in particular that I am very fond of is a gasoline can with a spout that I sprayed gold. My avocado is really thriving in it.

ART TALENT CONTEST WINNERS — Winners of Hallmark Art Contest, sponsored by Sorosis of Kingston, local affiliated Club of New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, were named Friday, Feb. 20 at Bonanza Branch of Kingston Savings Bank. They include (L-R) Kevin Melahn, "Two Out of Three Ain't Good, honorable mention; Judy Fitzgerald, "Faces No. 1", second award; and Calvin Saunders, "Future Existence," first place.

Hallmark Art Contest Winners Are Named

Calvin Saunders, art editor of Kingston High School's yearbook, The Maroon, was awarded first prize for his canvas entitled, "Future Existence," in the 1970 Hallmark Talent Contest, sponsored by Sorosis of Kingston. The contest was held in the Bonanza Branch of Kingston Savings Bank on Saturday, Feb. 20.

Calvin is a member of the art editorial staff of "Reason and Rhyme" and plans to attend State University College at New Paltz. Second place was awarded Judy Fitzgerald for "Faces No. 1." Judy is vice president of KHS Art Club. Honorable Mention was given to Kevin Melahn and Merit Awards presented to

Jacqueline DeWitt and Donna Woods. Entries were submitted by KHS seniors who are majoring in art under the direction of Mrs. Diana Stigbert. Judges included Mrs. Nancy Summers, Angelock of Woodstock, a former teacher who has held shows at Polari Gallery in Woodstock and is a winner of Woodstock

Foundation Award; Mrs. Katherine Wagenfohr, retired art teacher and former dress designer, who has lectured at National Committee on Art Education at the Museum of Modern Art, and is currently a director of the Children's Rehabilitation Center in Kingston. Mrs. Valerie Beardsley who served as judge in this art contest in 1969, served again this year. Formerly from California, Mrs. Beardsley has a BA degree in Commercial Art and is a member of Kingston Art Association. The goals of the annual art competition, sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs of which Sorosis of Kingston is a member, in cooperation with Hallmark Cards, Inc., are "to encourage youth to find its place in the rewarding world of art, to give appropriate recognition and assistance to talented young people, and to stimulate greater public interest in their endeavors." The exhibit will be on display at the bank through March 5. The public is invited.

Number of Women Holding 'Extra' Jobs Increasing

By GAY PAULEY
NEW YORK (UPI) — It's a well publicized fact that the number of women holding jobs outside the home increases steadily.

Only the other day, the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Labor Department announced its latest count of feminine heads on the job and found the number had doubled since the turn of the century. Reasons given — women continue to outnumber men and barriers to female employment continue to come down.

Today, there are 31.4 million women workers, accounting for 38.5 per cent of the labor force.

But where are these women working? Some interesting answers are included in the bureau's new "Handbook on Women Workers." Feminine employment has expanded in nearly all the major job occupations since the 1940's. The greatest growth, though, has been in the number of clerical workers — from 2.5 million women 14 years old and over in 1940 to 9.3 million in 1968, or more than a three-fold increase.

In the professions, women also have made worthy gains, more than doubling since 1940. Some four million women, or one out of each seven employed and over 16 years of age, were in professional or technical occupations as of April, 1968, the latest count. In the professional category, teaching continues to be the most popular profession. The 1.7 million women teaching at the below — college level represented 42 per cent of all the professionals.

But the bureau said there'd been a decline in the proportion of women teaching at the college and university level. It didn't say why.

Frazier Ain't Nuthin' To Muhammad Ali

By MORT LAFFIN

KINGSTON — "I'd take him in five, that ain't no jive and if he don't believe me, I'll do it in three." Yes, it was all the same, the message, the moves, even the rhyme-scheme. It was Muhammad Ali, or Cassius Clay, if you will, giving his prediction of what he would do to the now-heavyweight champion of the boxing world, Joe Frazier, when and if a fight could have been made.

Ali made up that little ditty, or sonnet, if the Great Bard will forgive him, last night before his lecture on "Black Separatism" at the Kingston High School auditorium.

"Of course if ain't ever gonna happen," he said. "I'm retired, they retired me, took my title, or so they think, but I'm still the champ. Ain't nobody ever whumped me."

"I'm the prettiest, fastest, quickest, greatest fighting, boxing machine that ever stepped in the ring. I could beat 'um all, Joe Louis, Jack Dempsey, Jack Johnson, none of 'um would stand a chance."

"What about the computer fight you lost to Marciano," we asked, in reference to the fight staged between the two men, feeding all the facts about both into the computer and it in turn, feeding back its decision.

Depend on Locale

"It all depends on whose running the machine," he said. If they ran it in Mississippi or Alabama, they would have had Marciano killing me dead in the first round. If Stokely Carmichael or Rap Brown or Huey Newton, Elijah Muhammad or my brother was runnin' it, I'd won on one punch."

"Frazier ain't nothin'," he said. "None of them guys are when compared to me. Cus D'Amato said so, Jimmy Jacobs has all the films of the great fighters and he says ain't none of them can touch me."

"Watch this," said Ali. "Here's how I'd take Frazier." And he loosened his double-breasted jacket.

The hands began to move quickly in and out. "Biff, bam, zap, zap, bop, bop, bop," he hollered. "Frazier comes plodding in and I sting him, then move out, zip, zip." And he shot two quick lefts past yours truly's nose, so fast that we had to ask how many he actually threw.

Then, he danced around ducking and sparring, shadow boxing with the wall, smiling to himself as he sent left jabs, hooks and right crosses into the all-ready bloodied face of his imaginary opponent.

As quickly as he started, he stopped, the boyish, self-confident grin gone from his face. He clouded over, buttoned his coat and said:

"Of course, it ain't ever gonna happen. I'm retired. I won't fight any more. I got out before this happened." And he pushed his nose in flat with one hand, pulled his ear out, cauliflower-style with the other and uttered, "Duuuh!"

"But," and his eyes rolled to the ceiling. "If I was proven innocent of those draft-dodging charges and could get a license, well, we'd at least have to have a press conference."

Looks in Shape

"Look at this," he said, in

NEW YORK — "I wonder if we really deserve a place in regional tournament after this miserable showing tonight."

A bitterly disappointed, frustrated Coach Mike Perry said it after watching Ulster County Community go down to a 63-55 defeat at the hands of New York City Community.

It wasn't an easy loss for the UCCCC coach to overlook. It was only their fourth in 24 games. "We were terrible," he went on. "The team is wrapped up in lethargy. If we get past the first round in the Reg, it will be a miracle."

Perry had been wary of New York Community since the 1969-70 schedule was announced. He said it was one of the teams likely to beat the Senators during the season.

Poorer Than Poor
But Perry didn't expect the New Yorkers to whip his Mid-Hudson Conference champions with only 36 per cent accuracy from the floor (25 for 70). There is an explanation, however. Ulster was even worse — 33 per cent on 21 for 64 — easily its most dismal exhibition of the season. The Senators blew nine easy layup shots and 11 free throws.

Despite their inept shooting, the Senators managed to hang in as late as 2:10 left when the Bees pulled away for good. The loss reflected a consistent pattern on the road for UCCCC. All four setbacks in the now 20-4 season have come in the hinterlands.

What was particularly galling to Coach Perry was the fact that the last two defeats have been to teams outside the conference — Farmingdale with an illustrious 8-11 record and New York which was 11-13 going into Wednesday's game.

Jerry Moss led the Senators with 20 points but his old foul miseries kept him chained to the bench for 11 minutes of the second half. Larry Trippodo was 0 for 7 from the field.

Favours Face City

Len Favours, the 6-6 sophomore, led New York with 22 points and dominated the boards, leading Perry to muse, "I guess we're beginning to realize just how much Gary Kirkwood meant to this team." Bernard Brown, the top NYC gun on the other hand, had a poor night with 10 points.

Drop Thanksgiving Game

KINGSTON — The traditional Thanksgiving Day football game between Newburgh Academy and Kingston High has become another victim of the space age.

By unilateral action, the Newburgh Free Academy Board of Education voted Tuesday night to drop the Turkey Day date and play it on Nov. 14.

Newburgh will be host for the 1970 contest. Superintendent of Schools Dr. Harold Monson of NFA gave various reasons why the Newburgh school took the action. One of the main factors was the extension of football into the basketball season.

Meanwhile, William J. Hurley, athletic director at Kingston High, said he wasn't surprised by the action.

although as of this morning (Thursday) he had received no formal notification.

"We've been expecting it," said Hurley. "We have been charting our 1970 schedule with that in mind."

Beyond the several reasons listed by both Hurley and Dr. Monson is the inescapable fact that the DUSO League, as such, is frittering away. Port Jervis has moved completely into the Orange County circuit and its Thanksgiving game with Middletown went by the boards some time ago.

Hurley said the weather was one of the major factors in dropping the holiday game.

"The game in recent years has been blessed with very few good days, weatherwise," he said. "Then you have the long lapse between the 7th and 8th games on the schedule and the kids are forced to practice under conditions that are not favorable."

The Kingston AD also mentioned the overlapping of the football and basketball seasons.

"We had our first basketball game on Dec. 3 this season," he noted, "and the football players who also play basketball simply weren't ready."

The game, which was first played in 1915, was originally played at 2 p.m. Several years ago the starting time was advanced to 11 a.m. or the theory that parents, students and alumni could watch the game and still get home in time for the traditional turkey dinner.

In recent years, however, the game has run into prime NFL football time which has affected attendance.

Hurley said Kingston would close its 1970 season with the Nov. 14 Newburgh game, with Nov. 7 an open date. He is seeking a game for Sept. 26 and said, "It looks like we'll have to go into the Westchester area."

Pistol Pete NIT's Top Ticket Seller

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pete Maravich can make or break the 33rd National Invitation Tournament.

The floppy-haired sharpshooter from Louisiana State University, the leading scorer in college basketball history, is the only "name" player guaranteed to sell tickets and TV exposure for the NIT this year.

The NIT selection committee Wednesday named four of the 16 teams — LSU, St. John's, Marquette and Georgia Tech — for this year's tournament, but LSU and Maravich are the main attraction.

Most of the star players, like Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure, Calvin Murphy of Niagara, Dan Issel of Kentucky, Austin Carr of Notre Dame and Sidney Wicks of UCLA, are headed towards the NCAA tourney, but Maravich could make the NIT a big attraction all by himself.

The tourney opens on March 13, but LSU is sure to be saved for a national TV contest on Saturday afternoon in its opening game. If Maravich could propel the Tigers (17-7) to the semi-finals or finals, the NIT will be guaranteed a lot of excitement. Without him, the NIT could lose a lot of luster since tenth-ranked Marquette (19-3) is the only team in the top ten likely to be in the NIT this season.

While Maravich may be good for the NIT, it's also true the NIT could be good for Maravich. The LSU senior has never had a chance to showcase his talents in New York with all the resulting exposure to be national media. One or two 60-point, record-breaking performances at Madison Square Garden might boost his price in the bidding war between the NBA and the ABA.

Maravich, the most publicized college basketball star in the country, will be a prime target of both leagues when the pro clubs try to sign the collegians.

"I've always dreamed of playing in Madison Square Garden," Maravich said. "The people in New York really appreciate basketball and I think we can really put a show on for them."

Of course, LSU won't be expected to get as far as the semi-finals, since Maravich doesn't have that good a supporting cast. His Tigers have lost eight games already. The NIT had to pass up the Tigers the last two seasons because of the team's poor record.

Marquette was an automatic NIT choice because it rejected an NCAA bid on Tuesday. Marquette was disturbed because it was asked to switch from the Midwest to the Midwest regional in the NCAA. Marquette, a loser in the NIT finals in 1967 to Southern Illinois, could be the NIT favorite.

St. John's will be trying to give Lou Carnesecca the same kind of farewell it gave Joe Lapchick in 1965. The Redmen won the tourney in Lapchick's last game before retiring. This will be Carnesecca's farewell to St. John's before he joins the New York Nets. St. John's has appeared in the NIT 18 times and has won it four times. Both marks are records.

Georgia Tech will be playing in the NIT for the first time and made its only other post-season basketball appearance in 1960 when it played in the NCAA.

UCCCC Rated 16th

Ulster County Community College dropped one notch — to a tie for 15th place — in the final National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) basketball poll of the 1969-70 season.

UCCCC polled one first-place vote and 14 points to tie with Flint Community JC of Flint, Michigan. Ulster had a 20-3 record and Flint 18-3 at the time of the last poll.

Unbeaten Brevard College of Cocoa, Florida, overtook Vincennes, Ind., leaders for the past several weeks, for the No. 1 spot.

The Florida school, boasting a 23-0 record, finished eight points ahead of Vincennes in the balloting by the NJCAA's coaching board. Christian College, Dallas, Texas (27-4) placed third and San Jacinto College of Pasadena, Texas, the only junior college team with as many as 30 victories (30-4) ranked fourth. Fifth place went to Casper College 21-1 of Casper, Wyoming.

Completing the top 10 were: Robert Morris, Pittsburgh; Martin College, Pulaski, Tenn.; Bacone JC, Bacone, Oklahoma; and Worthington JC of Worthington, Minn.

Alcindor Double Trouble in Clutch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Low Alcindor did the Baltimore Bullets in twice.

The big rookie sank a foul shot with 14 seconds left in Milwaukee's 115-113 National Basketball Association victory over Baltimore Wednesday night and also cost the injury-plagued Bullets the services of guard Kevin Loughery.

The victory moved Milwaukee to within six games of the first-place New York Knicks in the Eastern Division and increased the Bucks' lead to 5½ games over third-place Baltimore.

Loughery was sent to the hospital for X rays after he caught one of Alcindor's knees in the chest. According to a preliminary report, he may have suffered a fractured rib. Because of injuries, the Bullets dressed only eight players for the game.

Kentucky 117-114. Denver downed Carolina 120-110. Miami took Pittsburgh 124-115. Washington topped New Orleans 113-105 and Dallas outlasted Los Angeles 147-142.

Trailing 91-75 late in the third quarter, Milwaukee fought to within 111-110 before going ahead on baskets by Flynn Robinson and Greg Smith. Monroe missed a 15-foot jumper at the buzzer.

Boston erupted for 54 points in the fourth quarter in crushing San Diego. With the score tied 108-108, the Celtics went on a 21-point tear that put the game out of reach. Don Nelson poured in 40 points and John Havlicek 36 for Boston, while San Diego's Elvin Hayes connected for 46.

Philadelphia built a 20-2 lead as Detroit failed to make a basket in the first 7:29 of the game and coasted from there. It was the 12th straight victory for the 76ers over Detroit in Philadelphia dating back to Dec. 10, 1965.

Hal Greer paced a balanced Philadelphia attack with 24 points. Dave Bing led Detroit with 32.

Rangers By Four

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Rangers take the National Hockey League's East Division lead into Boston tonight with a little bit of breathing room against the challenging Bruins.

But the guy who provided that breathing room—veteran Donnie Marshall—won't be there. Instead, Marshall will spend the day in New York's Lenox Hill Hospital with a possible separation of his left shoulder.

It was Marshall's disputed second period goal that gave the Rangers a 2-1 decision over St. Louis Wednesday night, opening a four-point bulge for New York in the east race over the Bruins.

Montreal remained five points behind by knocking off Pittsburgh 3-2 while Toronto tripped Oakland 4-1 and Minnesota tied Los Angeles 3-3 in other games. The Rangers were leading 1-0 on defenseman Arnie Brown's 13th goal of the season when Marshall raced into the St. Louis zone and lifted a high shot at the net let goalie Jacques Plante take it from there.

"It hit me on the outside of the right elbow," said Plante. "It turned around and it was right there," he said, motioning at his feet. "I thought I had it. I got a good piece of it."

Marshall's stick shot into the air but the red light didn't go on. For a moment, confusion reigned. But referee Art Skov quickly took charge of the situation, signalling that the puck had gone into the net.

Ryan beat Robinson in the 200 yard freestyle races. Ross picked up the 500 free and 100-yard backstroke, while Allitz, son of the Army wrestling coach, stopped Murray in his specialty—the 200 individual medley—and the 100 butterfly.

Pioneers Edge Sawyers, 64-61

By JIM MASSA

POUGHKEEPSIE "We had them hanging and let them off," were the words of Saugerties coach Jerry Hawkins. Hawkins' team had just lost a 64-61 DCSL encounterment with Poughkeepsie High School here Wednesday night.

Hawkins was referring to the fact that his boys had the ball with three minutes left in the game with the score tied at 57.

The Sawyers came down court and Harvey Cohen stole the ball and went in for the score to give Poughkeepsie a 59-57 lead. Saugerties then shot and missed. Gary Stauderman then made a three point play to push the Pioneers out in front 60-57. After a turnover, Allen Quigley hit for the final Pioneer bucket 64-57.

John Carnright then came back to score two quick baskets for the Sawyers, but it was too late as time ran out with the Pioneers victorious 64-61.

Allen Quigley and John Smith led the Pioneer scoring with 17 points each but got balanced help from Mike Patrice who hit for 16 points. John Carnright led the Sawyers with 17 points and the league's top scorer Bill Benham had 15 points.

"I felt there was a lot of pressure on Benham as he might have been thinking about the 12 points he needed to win the scoring title in the DCSL," his shooting was off," said Hawkins. "I'm in no way blaming Benham for our loss as we were tied with three minutes left in the game and anyone could have won it for us," added Hawkins.

Saugerties finished the season with a 7-7 DCSL record and 7-11 overall.

"I was disappointed that we didn't receive an invitation to the class A tournament, as we did beat Arlington by 20 points. John Jay twice and Roosevelt by 5 points and they receive double AA bids," said Hawkins.

NAIA's 118-Pound Title for Hammond

NEW PALTZ
Freshman Scott Hammond captured the 118-pound championship, as New Paltz State placed fifth in the NAIA District 31 wrestling meet at Trenton, N. J.

Newark Rutgers won the team title with 90 points. Trenton State was runnerup with 64 points, followed by Glassboro 54, Monmouth 33, New Paltz 23, Plattsburgh 20, Newark College 17, Marist 15, Drew 11 and Southampton 5.

New Paltz competed in the event for the first time.

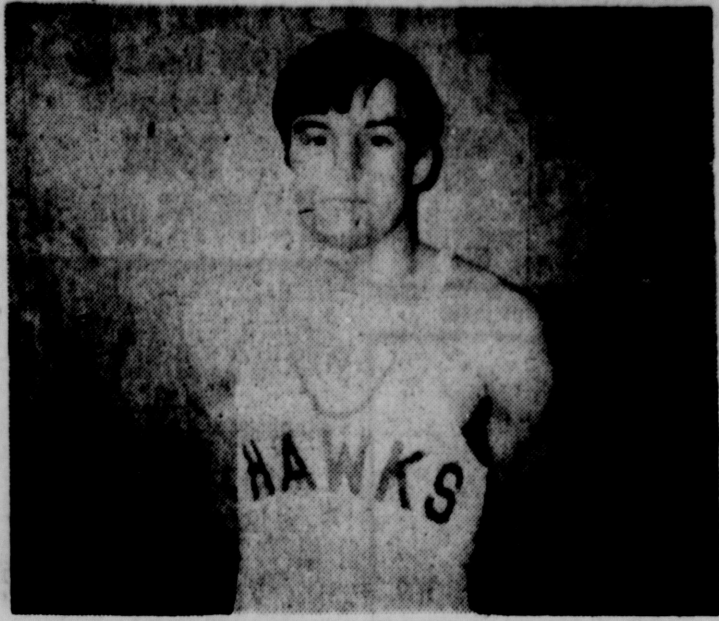

Seeded No. 1, Hammond won his first match with Joe Olivera of Newark-Rutgers, 10-2. Scott then defeated Harvey McDonald of Glassboro State, 7-4, before taking on the defending champion, Pete Yanazzo of Trenton State, in the finals.

Taken Down Once

Scott was taken down by Yanazzo and trailed 2-0 in the first period. He came back in the second, however, to reverse Yanazzo and tied the score. He then went on to dominate the match with an escape to win by a final score of 5-2.

"Scott never lost his poise and wrestled beautifully throughout the entire tournament," said Hawk coach Joe Owens. "He was never in difficulty with the execution of trailing 0-2 in the final bout. He is now the District 31 champion in the NAIA."

The competition in Hammond's class was formidable.

SCOTT HAMMOND

with McDonald, Yanazzo and Jim Feinberg of Monmouth College all top rated. Jim Longo, State's crack 126 pounder, who was seeded No. 4, was eliminated in the first round by Andy Gramicani of Newark-Rutgers, 5-2. The weight class featured four former high school state champions. Pete Martin of Plattsburgh, second place winner in the SUNYAC last season, was pinned by Don McArthur of Glassboro.

Gary Fesfeldt, the Hawks' 177 pounder was seeded No. 1 on the basis of a 10-0 record, but lost to defending champion, Bill Scott of Trenton State, 2-0.

Glasco Water Contract Will Undergo Revision

SAUGERTIES, boards met in a combined meeting, probably since the signing of the contract. Councilman George Turner said there was some discussion on the feed back of water from the Glasco District into the village system in case of a water emergency in the village where additional pressure is needed. The new million gallon standpipe in the Glasco Water District improves this feed back.

The pact signed in 1953 was reviewed by members of the Town Board and Village Board and several sections of the contract are being considered for revision.

Supervisor A. Michael Schovel said today that the meeting opened up new lines of communication between the town and village and there was general agreement that both parties should notify the other about changes in the water system which could affect one or both parties.

Town Attorney Louis P. Francello said it was the first time the town and village

Action Against Fla. Utility Is Asked by Hickel

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government may take a Florida utility company to court to halt part of a nuclear power plant project which it says could pollute Biscayne Bay, the oceanfront where President Nixon owns a vacation compound.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel Wednesday asked the Justice Department to take legal action against the Florida Power and Light Co. to stop it from building a six-mile canal. The canal would carry water from the plant south of Miami to Biscayne Bay and Crd Bay. Hickel said the water would be heated and could cause a thermal pollution of the two bays which he referred to as "two of the cleanest bodies of water remaining in America." Thermal pollution involves the introduction of heated water into naturally colder water, a condition which can cause unusual organic growth and changes in the water environment.

Hickel asked the company to stop digging the canal earlier this week, but the utility turned him down. The Justice Department said Hickel's request will be "studied to see if there is any possible course of action" that it may take.

Hickel has opposed the canal project for the past year, but Wednesday marked the first time he has resorted to legal action to stop it. Biscayne Bay is a national monument and the Nixon Florida vacation home fronts on a section of it.

Williams is scheduled to answer the summons March 4 at 4 p.m. at the Town of Ulster Court.

TOWN OF ULSTER. John Polcastro, 16, of Glasco, arrested on a charge of sexual misconduct Wednesday, was committed to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $1,000 bail following arraignment before Town of Ulster Justice Arthur A. Reilly. The charge stems from an alleged incident involving a girl under the age of 18 according to Investigator H. T. Bowers of the Ulster County Sheriff's Department. The case was adjourned until March 4 at 3 p.m.

Check Charge Against Woman

TOWN OF ULSTER. Mary Washington, 238 East Union Street, Kingston was arrested Wednesday by the Ulster County Sheriff's Department and charged with issuance of a fraudulent check at the Big Scot Department Store.

AMBUSH VICTIM BURIED—The casket containing the body of Mrs. Barbara Ertle, of Grandville, Mich., is laid to rest in the American cemetery at Jerusalem's German Colony on Wednesday. She was killed Monday when Arab guerrillas ambushed a tourist bus in which she was riding. (UPI CABLEPHOTO)

South Viet Forces Suffer Heavy Losses

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese forces suffered their heaviest losses in five weeks and American B52s flew the most Vietnam raids in a week in action reported today. The Stratofortresses dropped nearly 1,000 tons of bombs against what the U.S. Command described as guerrilla base camps, bunkers, weapons positions and staging areas along the Cambodian border. It was the heaviest B52 bombardment in Vietnam since Feb. 20 when the bombers flew eight missions. The bombers have spent most of the past week in Laos, where North Vietnamese troops have captured the Plain of Jars and are trucking in supplies at the heaviest rate of the Vietnam War. The South Vietnamese losses involved 14 killed and 19 wounded in a clash with guerrillas in marshlands near Giong Trom district town 45 miles southwest of Saigon Wednesday. The South Vietnamese marines reported killing 24 guerrillas in the battle near Giong Trom. Fighting elsewhere was light. The guerrillas carried out their heaviest shelling attacks overnight since Feb. 4, bombarding 29 Allied installations with mortar or rockets. The targets included two district towns, killing one Vietnamese civilian and wounding a soldier and 10 civilians.

Another Paris Try

PARIS (UPI)—The United States discarded again today the practice of delivering prepared speeches at the Vietnam peace talks and tried to draw the Communist side instead into an informal discussion on releasing prisoners. Hanoi diplomats minutes earlier had, for the first time, told a visiting American woman the fate of her missing husband, informing Mrs. John O'Grady of Las Vegas, Nev., that he was not in a prisoner of war camp.

Any chance for progress on the prisoner issue was dimmed, however, by the continuing boycott of the Communists' top negotiators. North Vietnam sent its No. 3 man and the Viet Cong their No. 2 man, apparently in protest against what they call the downgrading of the talks by the United States.

The Hanoi representative, Nguyen Minh Vy, issued a statement before the session denouncing what he called "the escalation of the war in Laos by the Washington administration." Hanoi's troops are reported moving westward across Laos without resistance. American Ambassador Philip C. Habib, the object of the Communist boycott since he replaced Henry Cabot Lodge as the U.S. negotiator, went into the 58th session of the talks saying he would not have a prepared statement for the second successive week.

"Once again," Habib said, "we are raising the question of prisoners of war. . . we are making clear that the treatment of prisoners is a practical issue which demands immediate action. We also raise the desirability of making arrangements for the release of all prisoners on both sides."

Hanoi, VC Strength Ebbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong strength is going down in South Vietnam as infiltration lags behind enemy losses, Pentagon officials say.

Meanwhile, they report, the enemy is streamlining its fighting forces to carry out small unit attacks on a wider and more efficient scale.

These points stand out in war situation assessments given Congress in recent days by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At the same time, Laird and Wheeler—back from a recent on-the-spot survey in Vietnam—report a steep rise in the enemy's movement of supplies into South Vietnam along the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Laird, testifying before the House defense appropriations subcommittee, said Wednesday over-all North Vietnamese-VC forces have declined in recent months.

"From information currently available, it appears the enemy's force level will continue to decline, at least through the foreseeable future," he said. The defense secretary added that North Vietnamese infiltration "is not expected to keep up with enemy losses, including combat casualties and defections."

Laird gave no figures, but the most recent Pentagon report on enemy strength said there were about 240,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in South Vietnam as of last fall.

Wheeler estimated the enemy lost about 157,000 men killed last year while another 47,000 plus defected.

"There is little evidence now of any significant increase in introduction of personnel into the pipeline," Wheeler said.

He informed Senate committees that about 100,000 North Vietnamese infiltrated south in 1969, suggesting a deficit, although the absence of figures on Viet Cong recruitment makes it impossible to judge how big a deficit.

Wheeler said while enemy over-all strength has declined over the past 13 months, the number of enemy combat and support battalions increased.

This, Wheeler said, reflects "the enemy's determination to improve his force structure in a manner which enhances his capability for conducting small unit attacks."

Senators Want the Laos Facts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an angry attack against the American role in Laos, a bipartisan group of senators has demanded the administration disclose how heavily the United States is involved in the war-torn Asian nation.

"The facts of our involvement have been concealed from the American people," Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore declared during floor debate Wednesday, a charge supported by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill.

Another Republican, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, said "Laos has become an arena for the repetition of the mistakes of our Vietnamese involvement."

"I believe that the American people—and the Congress—will not accept a withdrawal policy from Vietnam that entails merely a changing of uniforms and titles and re-engagement in Laos."

The Maryland senator pointed to "news reports from usually reliable publications" indicating hundreds of former Green Berets military advisers "swarming over the country in numbers proportionately larger than the Kennedy administration commitment of advisers" in Vietnam.

The debate, conducted before only a handful of senators, came against a backdrop of a strong North Vietnamese force that has moved quickly and with great success against the Royal Laotian army in spite of heavy bombings by U.S. B52s.

So far the North Vietnamese have captured the strategic Plain of Jars and the nearly as important airstrip and town of Muong Soui.

The fear that the American fighting role in Vietnam is fast spreading to neighboring Laos threaded through many of the arguments made on the floor Wednesday.

Both Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and

Kentucky Republican John Sherman Cooper made this can get out of that situation by point, with Mansfield stating becoming involved in another that if U.S. involvement in Laos war.

grows "all the plans for Vietnamization will go down the drain and we will find ourselves in a most difficult situation."

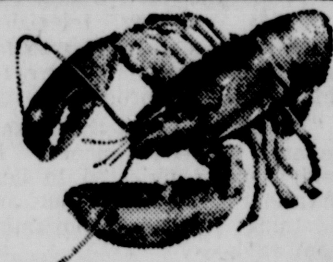

Pointing to President Nixon's peace efforts in Vietnam, Cooper said "I do not see how we can get out of that situation by becoming involved in another that if U.S. involvement in Laos war."

So far, the administration has refused to disclose how many Americans are serving in Laos, the rate of American air missions in that country or the U.S. casualty rate.
